BORDER VICTORY

Strict policies on illegal immigration working

By John Friend

A policy adopted by the Trump administration roughly one year ago designed to combat the migrant crisis appears to be paying off in a major way at the U.S. border.

The Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP), more commonly known as the “Remain in Mexico” policy, was first adopted in January 2019, and effectively ended the disastrous “catch and release” policy which allowed migrants to enter and settle in the United States—often under dubious or fraudulent pretenses—as they waited for an immigration hearing. The previous “catch and release” policy had long been criticized by those concerned with the egregious exploitation of U.S. asylum and immigration laws. Once inside the U.S., many assumed asylum seekers fail to show up for their hearings, allowing a huge number of individuals and families to go unaccounted for.

“The importance of MPP can’t be stated enough; it is what’s allowed us to take control of the crisis that we saw in April and May,” Acting Homeland Security Secretary Chad Wolf explained to Fox News last December. “The idea is to make sure we process individuals in a timely manner but make sure they wait south of the border.”

The numbers demonstrate just how effectively the policy has worked. In

CHAD WOLF

May 2019, at the height of the border crisis, more than 144,000 migrants were apprehended by border patrol and immigration officials. In November 2019, that number dropped to just over 42,000, marking a 70% reduction. Those seeking to exploit U.S. immigration laws recognize that they will not simply be released after encountering customs and border patrol agents.

“The president’s strategy to address the historic flood of Central American family units illegally crossing the border has worked, and catch and release is over,” a Trump administration official recently told Fox

Acting Homeland Security Secretary Chad Wolf says that stopping the catch-and-release program at the southern border has made a huge difference.

News. “We are removing, returning, and repatriating more illegal aliens, including Central American families, than ever before, and illegal border crossing cases are completed faster than ever.”

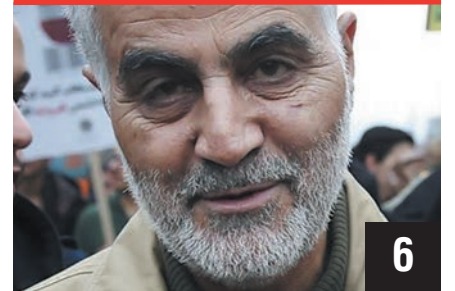

Over the course of the past year, the Trump administration has also negotiated deals with Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador, allowing U.S. officials to send asylum seekers back to these Central American countries. Additionally, a policy adopted in July allows customs officials to deny asylum to migrants who crossed another border before attempting to claim asylum in the U.S.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services Acting Director Ken Cuccinelli has praised the Trump administration’s progress in combating the migrant crisis along the southern U.S. border.

“As an agency, we have worked hand-in-hand with our fellow [Homeland Security] components to answer President Trump’s call to address the ongoing crisis at our southern border,” Cuccinelli stated late last year. “In the face of congressional inaction, we’ve taken significant steps to mitigate the loopholes in our asylum system, combat fraudulent claims, and strengthen the protections we have in place to preserve humanitarian assistance for those truly in need of it.”

Immigration will no doubt continue to be a major political issue, particularly as we enter the 2020 election season. While progress has been made at the border, immigration officials must remain vigilant and determined to enforce the law. ★

A PERSONAL MESSAGE FROM THE EDITOR

Donald Trump's Truly Terrible Foreign Policy

The assassination by a U.S. drone of Iranian Maj. Gen. Qassem Soleimani on Jan. 3 makes no sense to us unless we take into account that President Donald J. Trump is still surrounded by Deep Staters, warmongers, and chickenhawks—the very swamp people he promised to ditch while campaigning three years ago.

As AMERICAN FREE PRESS goes to press, thankfully, escalating tensions between the United States and Iran have somewhat softened following the barrage of missiles Iran launched at two U.S. bases in Iraq in the early morning hours of Jan. 8. We have tried to wrap our brains around why Trump would authorize this confrontational—and illegal under U.S. law—assassination in the first place when no evidence has been provided that Soleimani was involved in any attacks on U.S. forces of late. In fact, as we note in our lead news item on page three, it appears that Soleimani was visiting Iraq on a mission of peace, at the behest of the Iraqi prime minister, when he was blown up by a U.S. missile.

Over the past few days, we have heard war propaganda that this Iranian general's "hands were drenched in both American and Iranian blood," as Trump so poetically put it during a public address on Jan. 8. We were told that Soleimani was personally responsible for "some of the absolutely worst atrocities. . . . He viciously murdered thousands of U.S. troops."

We actually took some time to look into Trump's claims, however, and found very little evidence to support them. Soleimani was no doubt a seasoned military man. He served on the front lines, trained fighters throughout the Middle East, and provided weapons to groups that have been fighting Israel and Saudi Arabia. The only definitive statements we could find about his targeting of U.S. troops, though, draw upon a series of Pentagon reports, which speculated that approximately 608 out of nearly 4,500 U.S. soldiers who died in Iraq from 2003 to 2011 had been killed due to Iranian weapons and bombs provided to Shia militias. Most of these deaths, however, occurred around the time of the bloody civil war between Shia and Sunni Muslims, which broke out just after the U.S. invaded in 2003. U.S. troops were famously caught in the middle of this, facing down both Shia and Sunni groups that were vying for control of the country.

On April 2, 2019, Special Representative for Iran and Senior Advisor to the Secretary of State Brian Hook cited these reports during a State Department briefing, telling reporters: "Based on declassified U.S. military reports . . . Iran is responsible for the deaths of at least 608 American service members. This accounts for 17% of all deaths of U.S. personnel in Iraq from 2003 to 2011." That sounds pretty bad—except when you learn that the remaining 83% of U.S. deaths in Iraq were almost all attributed to Sunni fighters, many of whom were armed and funded by Saudi Arabia. Does that mean the Saudi royal family and their military leaders should be next on Trump's hit list?

Even if we accept that Soleimani is a terrible human being, that still does not justify his killing.

The Middle East is full of men and women with blood on their hands—many of whom our country's leaders refer to as allies today. Certainly, even the U.S. military, as well as President Bill Clinton, the two Bushes, Hillary Clinton, Madeleine Albright, Colin Powell and Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, to name but a few of our own leaders, have the blood of innocents on their hands as well. After all, more than a million Iraqis would still be alive today if the U.S. had never waged aggressive wars against their country.

If you need more proof that killing Soleimani was a colossally bad idea, a quick glance at some of the most vocal cheerleaders provides a good barometer of what side we should be on.

Take John Bolton, the infamous chickenhawk who has never seen a day of combat in his life. Shortly after news broke of Soleimani's death, Bolton took to the internet to celebrate: "Congratulations to all involved in eliminating Qassem Soleimani. Long in the making, this was a decisive blow against Iran's malign Quds Force activities worldwide. Hope this is the first step to regime change in Tehran."

And then there was the recently indicted Israeli criminal Benjamin Netanyahu, who cheered on the president for murdering the Iranian general before adding, "the assassination of Soleimani isn't an Israeli event but an American event. We were not in-involved and should not be dragged into it." You can't make this stuff up.

We have dedicated considerable editorial space to Iraq and the killing of Soleimani in this week's issue. For over 30 years, the U.S. military has been sanctioning, bombing, and occupying Iraq at a cost of trillions of taxpayers' dollars—and untold thousands of lives—all for nothing.

Since taking office, Trump has accomplished much. He has had considerable success managing the crisis on our border. He has renegotiated multiple bad free-trade agreements. His policies have helped to revive the U.S. economy. His greatness continues to be diminished, however, by his truly terrible foreign policy.

On the campaign trail, Trump told supporters he would get the U.S. out of all of the stupid wars his predecessors dragged us into. So far, he has not only failed to live up to any of those claims but has actually sent more troops to the Middle East.

On Jan. 6, the Iraqi Parliament voted overwhelmingly to expel the U.S. military from their country. It is our sincere recommendation that you, Mr. President, embrace that gift that's been handed to you, and do what you promised all of us while on the campaign trail: Bring our troops home once and for all. ★

News You May Have Missed

Peace Mission Dies With General?

Days after the U.S. assassination of Iranian Gen. Qassem Soleimani, who had been traveling in Baghdad in an official capacity from Iran, Iraqi Prime Minister Adil Abdul-Mahdi went before the Iraqi Parliament on Jan. 5 to say that Soleimani was in Iraq on a peace mission. “The [Iraqi] government refused to give any cover for the protests around the U.S. embassy, and I threatened to leave my position if they don’t retreat, which they did,” he said. He then added: “I received a phone call from [President Trump] when the embassy protests ended thanking the government efforts and asked Iraq to play the mediator’s role between U.S. and Iran.” Abdul-Mahdi concluded by saying, “I was supposed to meet Soleimani in the morning the day he was killed. He came to deliver to me a message from Iran responding to the message we delivered from Saudi [Arabia] to Iran.”

Limiting President’s War Powers

For years, AMERICAN FREE PRESS has been pressing Congress to pass legislation that would limit a president’s ability to start wars, and, unfortunately, for years, those calls largely fell on deaf ears. Now, House Democrats say they will be introducing a bill that scales back the unlimited power a president claims to initiate hostilities under the so-called War Powers Act of 1973. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) made the announcement on Jan. 5, following President Donald Trump’s order to assassinate Iranian Gen. Qassem Soleimani.

CNN Settles With Defamed Student

Fox News reported on Jan. 7 that CNN settled the defamation lawsuit filed by Covington Catholic High School student Nick Sandmann over its absurd and defamatory coverage of a confrontation with a Native American activist who had lied and claimed that the Kentucky teen was the aggressor. CNN reportedly settled with Sandmann for an undisclosed amount. Sandmann was asking for $250 million for the “emotional distress Nicholas and his family suffered” in the fallout of the network’s reporting. As AFP goes to press, Sandmann’s suit against The Washington Post and NBC News are ongoing.

Green Policies to Blame

Alarmists have been quick to blame so-called climate change for the recent, horrific fires in Australia and California. It appears, however, that the catastrophic fires that have plagued Australia have more to do with criminals and poor land management than drastic changes in the Earth’s weather. According to The Brisbane Times, an Australian daily, police have “dealt with” 98 people—31 adults and 67 juveniles—deliberately setting fires across the country. So far, according to reports, 24 people have been charged with arson. But that is not all.

“The Washington Examiner” spoke to David Packham, an Australian scientist, who several years ago warned the country that misguided “green” policies preventing regular controlled burns to dispose of dead foliage would spell disaster for the country.

Fake Doomsday Predictions

On Jan. 1, Nick Nolte of “Breitbart” online news welcomed in the New Year by writing, “Back in 2004, the Department of Defense released a report assuring the world climate change would destroy all of us by the year 2020. Well, welcome to the year 2020! And welcome to yet another fake doomsday prediction number 42 from our renowned climate experts!”

Trade Deficit Falls

The U.S. trade deficit in November fell to the lowest level in three years as imports declined more than exports, reports Associated Press. The trade gap fell to $43.09 billion, lower than the $43.6 billion forecast by economists and significantly lower than the $46.9 billion trade deficit in October. November’s trade deficit was the lowest level since October 2016.

Transgender Sports

More states are wading into the debate over the participation of so-called “transgender” athletes in men’s and women’s sports. In the past two months, Republican legislators in five states have introduced legislation aimed at preventing athletes from competing in categories different than their biological sex. In other words, an individual who claims to be a woman but was born a male would have to compete on athletic teams for boys and men. In some cases, however, this poses a problem. For example, in Texas, a girl, who is “transitioning” to be a boy and is currently taking the male hormone testosterone to make her more masculine, won the state championship in female wrestling competitions two years in a row. The student in question, “Mack Beggs,” was a senior at Eules Trinity High School near Dallas when she destroyed her competitors throughout the state, winning the state’s Class 6A 110-pound division last year. Had Beggs competed in the boys’ division, Beggs would have faced significantly more difficult competition.

Unbelievable Cost

According to estimates from Brown University’s Costs of War Project, the decades-long wars in Afghanistan, Iraq, and Syria have already cost more than $4 trillion. That figure is expected to eventually top $6 trillion when one factors in veteran care and other intangibles, according to a 2013 Harvard University working paper. That paper says the figure could hit $8 trillion by 2053. How many roads and bridges could have been built here in America for that kind of money? The answer? A heck of a lot.

More Evidence That Jeffrey Epstein Suicided

New photos obtained by the television news show “60 Minutes” reveal pedophile Jeffrey Epstein’s neck following his purported suicide as well as the torn sheet of prison linen he allegedly used to kill himself. In the photos, Epstein’s neck can be seen clearly, showing that the bloody line is just about his shoulders. Also, the makeshift “noose” is shown with no blood on it, which is more than strange. There was also a note written by Epstein complaining about prison conditions and prison guards: “Noel [prison guard] sent me burnt food. Giants bugs crawling over my hands. No fun.” “60 Minutes” interviewed famed forensic pathologist Dr. Michael Baden, who disputes the official claim that Epstein killed himself. “I think there’s a lot of information that still hasn’t been revealed yet that is essential in order to arrive at a conclusion, whether this is a suicide or homicide,” said Baden. “I think the closing out of the case as a suicide so quickly was premature.”

Expect Iran and U.S. to Conduct Escalating Proxy War Across Iraq

By Richard Walker

If we have learned anything from the United States' Middle East wars it is that we never tread carefully and, as the assassination of the Iranian Gen. Qassem Soleimani will soon demonstrate, we create martyrs and place a bullseye on every American.

The claims by President Donald Trump and those around him that Soleimani deserved to die is an argument we have heard many times to advance our roles in the deaths of Middle East leaders. It has hardly served America's best interests in that part of the world or globally.

This assassination is more significant than most because Soleimani was a revered figure whom the Israelis, who rarely shrink from killing their enemies, chose never to assassinate. They knew that the consequences were not worth the price that they would have to pay. It would, they calculated, unleash tit-for-tat killings for years. It would also breach an unwritten rule that you do not target major figures like the Quds force leader because Iran will later target your leaders. But make no mistake about it, the Israelis and the Saudis will be thrilled that Trump did something for them that they were not prepared to do.

The additional claim from some in the Trump administration that Soleimani's demise will weaken Iran's potential to strike back is without foundation. It will also not adversely impact Iran's activities across the region. One of the interesting aspects of the decision to kill the Iranian commander was that two days earlier, Trump talked about peace with Iran, yet within 48 hours Soleimani was dead after a drone strike at Baghdad airport.

America's allies were not informed in advance, and neither were congressional leaders.

Vice President Mike Pence even linked Soleimani to the 9/11 attacks for which there is absolutely no evidence. In fact, after 9/11, Iran offered to help America defeat al Qaeda and the Taliban, though President George W. Bush and Vice President Dick Cheney turned down the offer.

Also killed in the Baghdad drone strike was Abu Mahdi al-Muhandis who was revered by Iraqis for his role in fighting against Saddam Hussein and later for leading Kata'ib Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian militia that is part of the Iraqi army, in the defeat of ISIS. He fought alongside U.S. troops in many battles with ISIS.

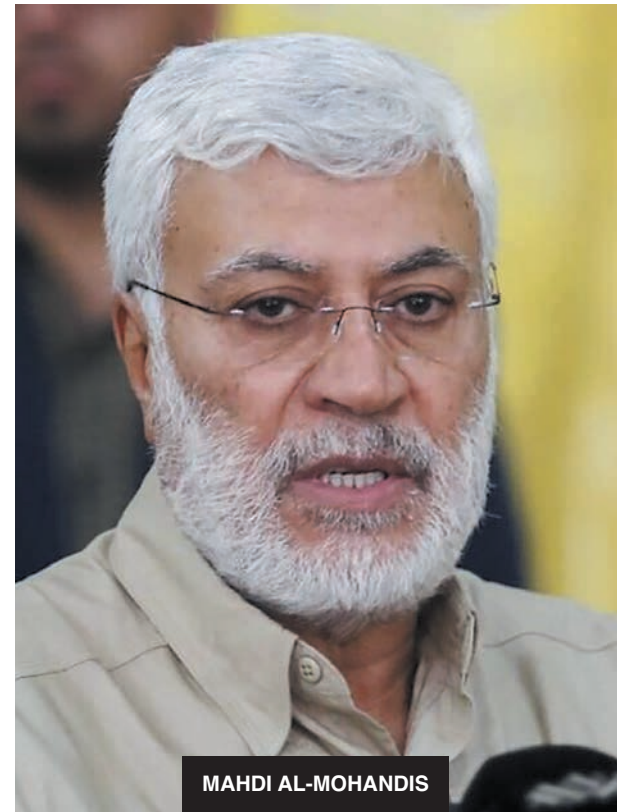

Soleimani also worked closely with the U.S. military to destroy ISIS in Iraq and Syria.

The major issue now facing many in the Middle East is the prospect of a new battlefield in which Iran and the U.S. will be engaged in a proxy war on Iraqi soil. If that happens, one of the unfortunate outcomes of the Soleimani assassination is that it may seriously weaken U.S.-Iraqi relations.

As expected, there is now a push within Iraq to demand that the U.S. pull its troops out of Iraq, which is a majority Shia country, just like Iran.

There have long been signs that Trump, at the prodding of neocons in his administration, has been anxious for a pretext to get into a shooting war with Iran, something that would please his close friends, Saudi leader Mohammed bin-Salman and Israel's Benjamin Netanyahu, who is under criminal indictment and is seeking a third term in office.

The pretext presented itself with the killing of an American mercenary on an Iraqi army base near the Syrian border where U.S. contractors were operating. Trump responded by ordering the bombing of five Iraqi army installations that housed the Kata'ib Hezbollah militia, killing 25 of its members and wounding 50.

MAHDI AL-MOHANDIS

Besides killing an Iranian general, the U.S. drone attack also killed Mahdi al-Muhandis, an Iraqi figure revered by many for his battle against Saddam Hussein and ISIS.

The bombings resulted in the now well-televised protests at Baghdad's Green Zone, the site of America's largest embassy in the world with a staff of thousands, including CIA and military. It is so large that it has often been compared to Vatican City. The very fact that we need such a large installation confirms how important Iraq is to our Middle East policy. So why jeopardize our presence in Iraq? The answer may be hard to come by because we rarely get the truth about our overseas operations. One thing that is certain is that Iran will strike back, and we will be in a new war of retaliation and terror.

This all happened after 500 young people demonstrating on the streets of Iraq between October and Christmas were killed for chanting "Out with Iran" and "Out with the Iraqi government." Their chants now will likely be "Out with America."

Soleimani's killing will galvanize anti-American elements and silence Iraqi millennials, who wanted change. In Iran, the killing will have the same effect on young people opposed to the regime.

Contrary to his many promises about getting the U.S. out of the Middle East, Trump is dragging the country back in by doing the bidding of the Israelis and Saudis and by sending even more troops to Saudi Arabia, all actions that appear designed to get an Iranian response.

Since last May, an additional 20,000 troops have been sent to the Middle East. Our standing in the region is at an all-time low after we abandoned Kurdish allies to the mercy of Turkish forces, and, yet, here we are again, walking like blind men into another potential war. ★

Close Iraq Embassy and Bring Troops Home

By Dr. Ron Paul

President Donald Trump and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo told us the U.S. had to assassinate Iranian Gen. Qassem Soleimani because he was planning “imminent attacks” on U.S. citizens. I don’t believe them. Why not?

Because Trump and the neocons—like Pompeo—have been lying about Iran for the past three years in an effort to whip up enough support for a U.S. attack. From the phony justification to get out of the Iran nuclear deal, to blaming Yemen on Iran, to blaming Iran for an attack on Saudi oil facilities, the U.S. administration has fed us a steady stream of lies for three years because they are obsessed with Iran.

And before Trump’s obsession with attacking Iran, the past four U.S. administrations lied ceaselessly to bring about wars on Iraq, Afghanistan, Syria, Libya, Serbia, Somalia, and the list goes on.

At some point, when we’ve been lied to constantly and consistently for decades about a “threat” that we must “take out” with a military attack, there comes a time where we must assume they are lying until they provide rock solid, irrefutable proof. Thus far they have provided nothing, so I don’t believe them.

Trump has warned that his administration has already targeted 52 sites important to Iran and Iranian culture and the U.S. will attack them if Iran retaliates for the assassination of Soleimani. Because Iran has no capacity to attack the United States, Iran’s retaliation, if it comes, will likely come against U.S. troops or U.S. government officials stationed or visiting the Middle East. I have a very easy solution for Trump that will save the lives of American servicemembers and other U.S. officials: just come home. There is absolutely no reason for U.S. troops to be stationed throughout the Middle East to face increased risk of death for nothing.

“America’s interventionist foreign policy brings only bankruptcy—moral and financial—and breeds even more enemies.”

The U.S. attack on a senior Iranian military officer on Iraqi soil—over the objection of the Iraq government—will serve to finally unite the Iraqi factions against the United States, and so it has. On Jan. 5, the Iraqi parliament voted to expel U.S. troops from Iraqi soil. It may have been a non-binding resolution, but there is no mistaking the sentiment. U.S. troops are not wanted and they are increasingly in danger. So why not listen to the Iraqi parliament?

Bring our troops home, close the U.S. embassy in Baghdad—a symbol of our aggression—and let the people of the Middle East solve their own problems. Maintain a strong defense to protect the United States but end this neocon pipe dream of ruling the world from the barrel of a gun. It does not work. It makes us poorer and more vulnerable to attack. It makes the elites of Washington rich, while leaving working- and middle-class America with the bill. It engenders hatred and a desire for revenge among those who have fallen victim to U.S. interventionist foreign policy. And it results in millions of innocents being killed overseas.

There is no benefit to the United States to trying to run the world. Such a foreign policy brings only bankruptcy—moral and financial. Tell Congress and the administration that for America’s sake we demand the return of U.S. troops from the Middle East. ★

General's Murder a Dangerous Gamble

• Assassination of Iranian who defeated ISIS could prove to be dumbest move ever

By Dr. Kevin Barrett

President Donald Trump occasionally utters unspeakable truths. In March 2018 he called George W. Bush's decision to invade Iraq "the worst single mistake in U.S. history." Earlier, Trump had said that Bush should have been impeached for launching that disastrous war. Yet on Jan. 2, Trump made a much bigger mistake: He sought to provoke a war with Iran—a war that will be joined by millions of non-Iranians—by murdering Iranian Gen. Qassem Soleimani, the legendary hero who defeated ISIS in Iraq and Syria.

Soleimani was by far the most popular figure in Iran and much of the Middle East. The Shia Muslim was adored by millions even outside that region, non-Muslims as well as Muslims. Christians throughout the world loved Soleimani, whose campaign against ISIS saved the lives of thousands of their co-religionists. Sunni Muslims—the people, not the billionaire playboy sheikhs—also generally loved and admired Soleimani, a saintly warrior-monk who even his enemies admitted was uncommonly spiritual, morally impeccable, and the greatest military genius of this young century.

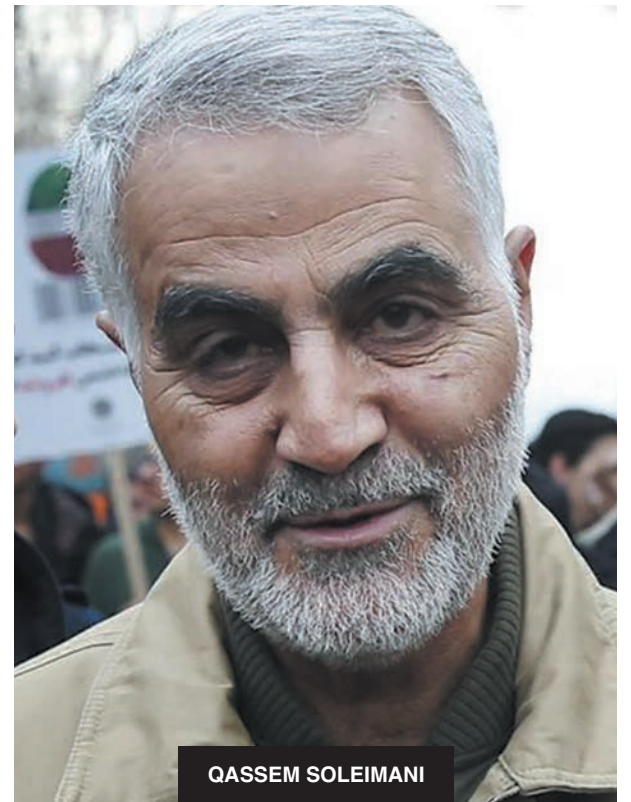

The strategic stupidity of Trump's order to murder Soleimani cannot be exaggerated. Since most Americans hadn't heard of Soleimani, perhaps some comparisons will be helpful.

To understand the effect on Iran and the region, imagine that Stalin had succeeded in murdering George Patton, Dwight Eisenhower, and Douglas MacArthur, all on the same day, in 1946. These U.S. generals, like Soleimani, were very popular, in part because they had just won a huge war against an enemy viewed as an embodiment of pure evil. How would Americans have reacted to such a crime? They would have united to destroy Stalin and the Soviet Union, no matter how long it took, no matter what sacrifices were necessary. That is how hundreds of millions of people will react to the martyrdom of Soleimani.

But even that comparison does not do justice to the situation. Patton, Eisenhower, and MacArthur were secular figures in an increasingly secular culture. Had Stalin murdered them, their deaths would not have risen to the level of religious martyrdom. Americans' motivation to avenge their deaths would not have been as deep and long-lasting, nor as charged with the avid desire to sacrifice everything in pursuit of the goal, in comparison with the hundreds of millions of future avengers of the death of Soleimani.

Trump's decision to assassinate the great Iranian general was perfectly timed—to unite Iraq against the continuing American occupation. Prior to the murder, Iraq was in chaos, as demonstrators protested against not just the U.S. and Israel, the real culprits in the destruction of Iraq, but also Iran, Iraqi politicians, and other targets. The same protestors, however, who disliked Iranian influence in Iraq loved Soleimani, whose saintly personality and military genius was widely admired, even by his worst enemies in Tel Aviv and Washington—and even more ardently admired by his "frenemies" in the region.

QASSEM SOLEIMANI

It is conceivable that Trump's new "worst mistake in U.S. history" will be remembered, like the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand on June 28, 1914, as the trigger of an unimaginably destructive world war. The strategic logic points to such an outcome: Iran is a nation of martyrs, and Shia Islam (the majority religion in Iraq) is a people of martyrs. True Muslims, like all genuinely religious people, do not fear death, so Iran, and Soleimani's other friends all over the world, will not hold back from retaliating sooner or later.

Iran's retaliation for the murder of Soleimani will force Trump up the escalation ladder. Iran, and Soleimani's other supporters, will not back down. The only way Trump could "win" would be by completely destroying Iran—and be remembered as the worst war criminal in world history, which is saying something.

Russia will face the same kind of decision it had to make when the Zionist-dominated U.S. tried to destroy Syria: Stand by and let Iran be annihilated, with Russia next in line, or use its considerable military power to save its ally. Russia will have no choice but to support Iran, just as it supported Syria. China, too, will need to ensure that the U.S. loses its Zionist-driven war on Iran. Otherwise, Beijing would risk facing the same fate as Tehran.

So Trump (or Pence, if the Zionists kill Trump and blame it on Iran) will face a choice: Accept defeat and withdraw all American bases and forces in the region or continue up an escalation ladder that inexorably leads to World War III. The higher up the ladder he goes, the harder it will be to jump off.

Trump will rue the day that he signed off on Zionist orders to kill Soleimani. ★

The Time for Vladimir Putin Is Now

• Russian leader may be the only man in the world who can avert WWII

By Dr. Paul Craig Roberts

Vladimir Putin is the most impressive leader on the world stage. He survived and arose from a Russia corrupted by Washington and Israel during the Yeltsin years and reestablished Russia as a world power. He dealt successfully with American/Israeli aggression against South Ossetia and against Ukraine, incorporating at Crimea's request the Russian province back into Mother Russia. He has tolerated endless insults and provocations from Washington and its empire without responding in kind. He is conciliatory and a peacemaker from a position of strength.

He knows that the American empire based as it is on arrogance and lies is failing economically, socially, politically, and militarily. He understands that war serves no Russian interest.

Putin understood that the Washington/Israeli intended destabilization of Syria was aimed at

For a detailed expert opinion on what makes Vladimir Putin tick, we suggest the book Russian Populist: The Political Thought of Vladimir Putin by Dr. Matt Johnson. Call toll free 1-877-773-9077 to charge a copy ($25 plus $5 S&H in the U.S.)

Russian President Vladimir Putin may be the only man who has the influence and intelligence to save Donald Trump from himself and the world from the insane policies of the neocons advising the U.S. president. If he doesn't act to cool the tensions brought about by the assassination of two beloved foreign figures, Russia may find itself at war, anyway.

Russia. Without warning, Russia intervened, defeated the Washington financed and armed proxy forces, and restored stability to Syria.

Defeated, Washington and Israel have decided to bypass Syria and take the attack on Russia directly to Iran. The destabilization of Iran serves both Washington and Israel. For Israel, Iran's demise stops support for Hezbollah, the Lebanese militia that has twice defeated Israel's army and prevented Israel's occupation of southern Lebanon. For Washington, Iran's demise allows CIA-supported jihadists to bring instability into the Russian Federation.

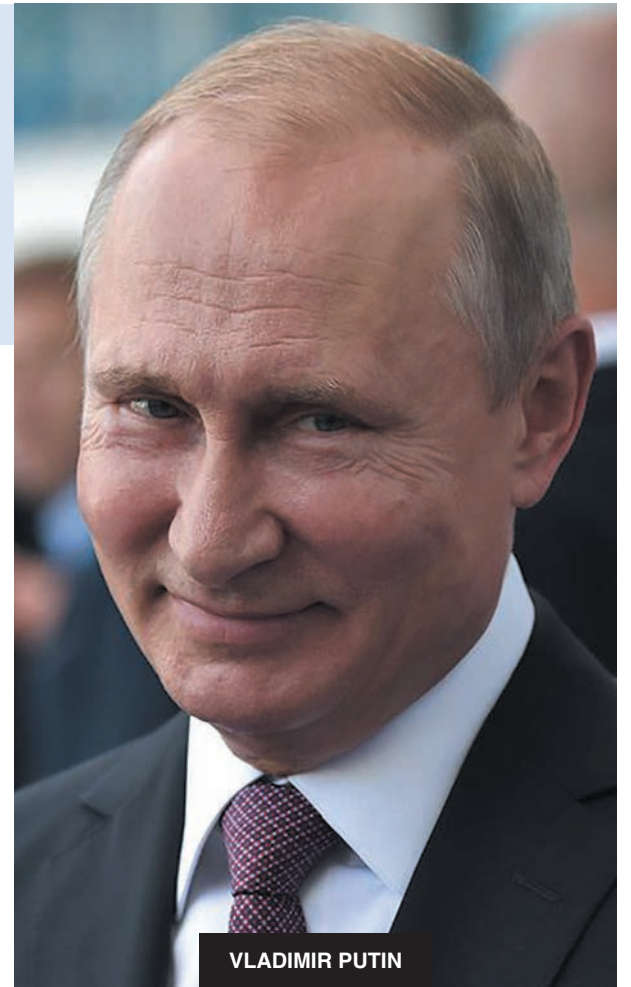

Unless Putin submits to American and Israeli will, he has no choice but to block any Washington or Israeli attack on Iran.

The easiest and cleanest way for Putin to do this is to announce that Iran is under Russia's protection. This protection should be formalized in a mutual defense treaty between Russia, China, and Iran, with perhaps India and Turkey as members. This is hard for Putin to do, because incompetent historians have convinced Putin that alliances are the cause of war. But an alliance such as this would prevent war. Not even the insane criminal Benjamin Netanyahu and the crazed American neoconservatives would, even when completely drunk or deluded, declare war on Iran, Russia, China, and if included in the alliance India and Turkey. It would mean the death of America, Israel, and any European country sufficiently stupid to participate.

If Putin is unable to free himself from the influence of incompetent historians, who in effect are serving Washington, not Russian, interests, he has other options. He can calm down Iran by giving Iran the best Russian air defense systems with Russian crews to train the Iranians and whose presence serve as a warning to Washington and Israel that an attack on Russian forces is an attack on Russia.

This done, Putin can then, not offer, but insist on mediating. This is Putin's role as there is no other with the power, influence, and objectivity to mediate.

Putin's job is not so much to rescue Iran as to get Trump out of a losing war that would destroy Trump. Putin could set his own price. For example, Putin's price can be the revival of the INF/START treaty, the anti-ballistic missile treaty, the removal of NATO from Russian borders. In effect, Putin is positioned to demand whatever he wants.

Iranian missiles can sink any American vessels anywhere near Iran. Chinese missiles can sink any American fleets anywhere near China. Russian missiles can sink American fleets anywhere in the world. The ability of Washington to project power in the Middle East now that everyone, Shia and Sunni and Washington's former proxies such as ISIS, hates Americans with a passion is zero. The State Department has had to order Americans out of the Middle East. How does Washington count as a force in the Middle East when no American is safe there?

Of course, Washington is stupid in its arrogance, and Putin, China, and Iran must take this into consideration. A stupid government is capable of bringing ruin not only on itself but on others.

So there are risks for Putin. But there are also risks for Putin failing to take charge. If Washington and Israel attack Iran, which Israel will try to provoke by some false-flag event as sinking an American warship and blaming Iran, Russia will be at war anyway. Better for the initiative to be in Putin's hands. And better for the world and life on Earth for Russia to be in charge. ★

Weird Device Could Help Homeowners GET OFF THE GRID using UNLIMITED POWER from Tesla's Zero Point Energy Source

A new book, Secrets of Using Water For Fuel, may provide the answers for homeowners seeking to heat their home this winter for free and to cut their ties to the electric power grid.

Hydrogen energy researcher and author David Davies reveals the methods researchers like Yull Brown, Andrija Puharich and Stanley Meyer purportedly used to run vehicles entirely on water. These inventors were SILENCED by Big Oil and the U.S. government that doesn't want the public to understand and adopt disruptive energy technologies that threaten trillion dollar industries. Nevertheless, their legacy lives on!

Mr. Davies' company, Zorrion Energy Trust, has designed and is building an integrated solar/Hydrogen generator to provide homeowners with clean, renewable electric power. Zorrion Energy Trust is working to protect inventors and to bring disruptive technologies to the market. (Learn more at https://dtp\_club.gr8.com/)

The latest invention uses pure hydrogen to produce instantaneous steam that is enough to power a 10+ kw steam powered genset. For people who require more power to provide electricity for a farm or business there is good news. The book reveals the technique the author uses to get as much as 3.5 times more power from the same amount of hydrogen fuel and about our revolutionary, new steam engine design called the Elliptical Steam Engine that can be scaled to produce 500 kw to well over 1 megawatt of clean electric power using a little-known kind of water and their new Plasma Arc Boiler.

Here are a few more things you'll learn when you read . . .

Secrets of Using Water For Fuel

- Why the old-school electrical engineers are dead wrong about the concept of "over-unity free energy" and how researchers are already getting 3X to 20X more energy OUT vs the paid-for input energy needed to fracture water.

- Why water is the secret to ultra efficient electrolysis. Discover a special type of water that reduces current required to make pure hydrogen fuel by up to 83%. Best of all, you'll learn how to make this special Orgone water at home using a counter top water processor. And, it will only cost you pennies a gallon!

- Plans for a low cost and simple but efficient hydrogen fuel cell you can build in your home workshop.

- Solar panels and windmills are extremely inefficient, expensive to maintain and obsolete. With my integrated water fuel system you'll be able to produce and store 99.995% pure hydrogen safely in hydride storage tanks.

- You could shoot a bullet at the tank. . . . IT WILL NOT BLOW UP . . . it is that safe!

Secrets of Using Water For Fuel
Softcover, $25. No S&H in U.S.

- Produce unlimited clean fuel 24/7, rain or shine. You will never again have to pay the electric company. You can laugh at rate hikes while your neighbors pay through the nose!

Why Your Family Must Avoid Being Without Power During the Coming Crisis . . .

- Why greed is powering the move to hydrogen fuel cell powered electric cars . . . AND a far better solution to zero pollution vehicles that uses my revolutionary technology; this information is certain to astound you!

- How to produce your own zero pollution fuel at virtually no cost to provide all your electric power needs OFF-THE-GRID. You could even live on a glorious, remote island anywhere in the world and never have to worry about your source of power.

- Why the coming worldwide economic collapse could leave Americans in the dark ages with no power, no light and, no fuel. You can prepare yourself now so your family is not left without power during the coming hard times.

- Discover the incredible power of using Pure Hydrogen in its atomic form, H1. Author's invention is a GAME CHANGER!

- And too much more to mention here!

Important Information for Homeowners

I've devoted an entire chapter to show you the incredible advantages of combining a small solar array with my Split Gas Hydrogen Generator using PEM technology (proton exchange membrane) for the most efficient pure hydrogen generation possible for the home owner.

Now, when you combine a small solar panel with pure hydrogen production, you can compress and store the hydrogen for fuel. Now, you can use it to fuel your boiler even when the sun doesn't shine. You'll also learn about the incredible benefits of using a remarkable new steam engine design to replace obsolete, noisy, unreliable gas and diesel generators. I'll show you where to get plans (patented worldwide) for about $20. The inventor claims you can build this steam engine for under $400 using off the shelf parts (except a few custom parts available from the inventor)

Nobody else seems to have caught onto this remarkable breakthrough in clean, renewable, off-the-grid energy production!

Gabbard the Only Candidate Who Can Bridge Left & Right

By S.T. Patrick

At this point in the Democratic Party campaign process, Rep. Tulsi Gabbard (D-Hawaii) has amassed more enemies among the elites in her own party than she ever had among Republicans. In fact, a surprising number of admitted conservatives are finding her campaign refreshing and attractive.

The final break with many Democratic loyalists may have been her House impeachment vote. Rather than voting to impeach President Donald Trump, Gabbard voted “present.” For this, she has been labelled a disrupter, a turncoat, and a coward. Conversely, her social media presence is strong, and backers have labelled it a “profile in courage.” In the fourth quarter of 2019, she raised $3.4 million for her presidential campaign.

Gabbard is not on the fence about Trump. She absolutely wants him out of office in 2020. But she understands the concept of troops rallying around an embattled leader. The more the media and the Democratic Party continue to pound the house of sand that is Russiagate and the more they demand blood, metaphorically, at the gates of the White House lawn, the more resolute Trump’s support becomes. Gabbard is trying to sound the call that the Democratic Party has been Trump’s best campaign organizers for 2020.

In an interview with ABC, Gabbard explained her vote.

“I think impeachment, unfortunately, will only further embolden Donald Trump, increase his support and the likelihood that he’ll have a better shot at getting elected while also seeing the likelihood that the House will lose a lot of seats to Republicans,” Gabbard said.

Gabbard was the only congressperson to vote “present” on impeachment. All others voted yea or nay. For this, she has only widened the gap between her campaign and the Democratic National Committee (DNC) that runs Democrat politics with an iron fist, a bulging bank account, and exclusive access to high-dollar donors. Gabbard is a politician who has dared to be different, and in doing so, has broken with her party line, alone, for years. She also understands that the rancorous nature of American politics in 2020 serves no one well.

Gabbard called her vote an “active protest” against the “terrible fallout of this zero-sum mindset” into which both parties have dug. It’s gotten tense, it’s gotten angry, and both sides are often engaged in battles they will surely find embarrassing years later.

“I am standing in the center and have decided to vote present,” Gabbard said, “because I could not in good conscience vote against impeachment, because I believe President Trump is guilty of wrongdoing.” The vote then was not a conscious choice to avoid a decision. It was, as she describes it, “standing up for the people of this country and our ability to move forward together.”

Instead of impeachment, Gabbard offered to the House of Representatives a bill that would censure the president rather than impeach him. A censure is a “formal, and public, group condemnation of an individual, often a group member, whose actions run counter to the group’s acceptable standards for individual behavior.” It’s a punishment and a public statement that one’s official behavior has been well below the expectations of the office.

Gabbard has built a short career of going against the grain, something she has cemented even this week as she continues to lash out strongly against political assassinations and going to war against Iran.

Gabbard has also said she would free both Julian Assange and Chelsea Manning, and she would allow Edward Snowden to come home unharmed.

She never supported the Russiagate debacle that so engaged her party’s favorite media outlets, and she is strongly anti-war, despite (or because of) being a military veteran of the conflicts in the Middle East. As she has served military time on the ground, it is impossible to label her a snowflake on the issue of war and peace. However, it is in this arena where she has been most criticized. Throughout their DNC-supporting lineup, MSNBC criticized Gabbard early when she all but accused the State and Defense Departments of running a propaganda war against Syria’s

While Tulsi Gabbard has some radical economic and social views, her consistent condemnation of the U.S. involvement in unnecessary and costly foreign wars could still bridge the divide between peacemakers on the left and right if she were elected president.

Bashar al-Assad.

The battle had already been underway between Gabbard and the DNC. In 2015, Gabbard was serving in her second year as a vice-chair of the DNC when she criticized chairwoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz’s decision to hold only six debates (there were 26 in 2008). Debates can hurt frontrunners, but they are often the only way a newer candidate can be seen nationally. To limit them gives the DNC more control over who stays at the top of the race. Wasserman Schultz also moved to bar anyone who had participated in debates not sanctioned by the DNC. Gabbard wrote a letter to the chairwoman, advising her that it violated the DNC’s duty of neutrality to openly support one candidate over the other. In 2016, the DNC backed Hillary Clinton. Gabbard then resigned from the DNC and became the first congresswoman to endorse Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.). Clinton has since heavily asserted that Gabbard is a “Russian asset.”

Gabbard is dangerous—and for all the right reasons, something Dr. Ron Paul understands very well. She truly has the ability to unite dissatisfied right and the left if she became president. She, more than anyone in either party, could be a healer in one of the country’s most cantankerous times. There will be disagreements on domestic policy, but she has shown an openness to pragmatism. The question that stands is whether or not she will run as an independent when the DNC finally pushes her out of the race completely—and it will. If she does, she would assuredly be a more popular independent than she ever was a Democrat. She has said she wouldn’t run as an independent, but again, pragmatism may demand it. If it’s Trump versus Biden, what choice would she have? ★

“We’ve got to be clear-eyed about the situation that we are in. . . . [America is] speeding toward an all-out war with Iran [that] would make the wars that we’ve seen in Iraq and in Afghanistan look like a picnic.” —Tulsi Gabbard

What Did Bidens Know About Mass Corruption in Ukraine?

Document in paternity suit against Hunter Biden alleges both Bidens aware of scheme to launder billions of dollars

By Donald Jeffries

A document related to an Arkansas paternity case involving Joe Biden's son, Hunter, has produced some startling revelations. Hunter Biden's bank records exposed a $156 billion counterfeiting scheme between Burisma, the Ukrainian gas company he was affiliated with, and the cybersecurity firm CrowdStrike. The document was filed by a Florida private-detective outfit, notifying the court of "felonies including fraud and counterfeiting." CrowdStrike is also remembered for investigating the alleged hacking of Democratic National Committee emails in 2016.

The paternity case was filed by Lunden Alexis Roberts, a former Washington, D.C., stripper, who is seeking full custody and child support after a November paternity test confirmed that her son was the biological child of Hunter Biden. At the time Roberts became pregnant, Hunter was in a relationship with the widow of his older brother, Beau, who passed away in 2015. In 2017, Hunter divorced his wife of more than 20 years, Kathleen, in order to date Hallie Biden, Beau's widow. Just a month after breaking up with Hallie, Hunter married another woman, Melissa Cohen. This paternity suit brought by yet another woman, exposing the kinds of sordid shenanigans followers of politics are all too familiar with, has opened the door to impressive evidence of more substantial corruption.

The filing details bank records of Burisma Holdings Limited and the Bank of China, among others. The document reads, "December 2016 into January 2017. After the theft of $5.4+/- billion in foreign aid, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) froze foreign aid to Ukraine and suspended PrivatBank's international transactions. On 11 September 2019. The IMF released the freeze to allow foreign aid after the Ukraine Court issued Search and Seizure Warrants to be executed on PrivatBank."

Florida-based D & A Investigations lead investigator Dominic Casey has been smeared in the mainstream media for his alleged history of "pursuing right-wing conspiracy theories." Casey filed a document detailing Hunter Biden's involvement in multiple criminal investigations regarding Burisma, in an effort to get it entered into the paternity case, but Independence County, Ark. Judge Don McSpadden tossed the motion only hours after it was filed. McSpadden would go on to recuse himself from the case, with only a minimal, nebulous explanation. He didn't respond to any questions from local reporters.

It has also been alleged that Hunter Biden is hesitant to disclose five years of back tax returns in the paternity case because it would expose his personal fraud. It was recently reported that the IRS is going after Biden for over $112,000 in back taxes. This is especially ironic in light of all the Democratic Party and mainstream media demands for Donald Trump to release his tax returns. Hunter Biden told the court in November 2019 that he was currently unemployed and had been without any income since May. Ms. Roberts's attorneys reported to the court that Biden had failed to provide all the requested financial information and asked the judge to hold him in contempt of court.

The allegations of corruption surrounding Hunter Biden are extensive. A few months back, the Washington Examiner reported that Rosemont Capital, an investment firm linked to Hunter Biden, received more than $130 million in federal bailout loans while his father was vice president of the United States. Federal banking and corporate records showed that the money was routed through a subsidiary in the Cayman Islands. Such offshore destinations are regularly used by the very wealthy as tax shelters.

HUNTER BIDEN

Under the 2009 federal loan program known as the Term Asset-Backed Securities Loan Facility, or TALF, the U.S. Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve issued billions of dollars in highly favorable loans to select investors, including Rosemont Capital, with the understanding they would buy problematic bonds from banks, including bundled college and auto loans. As is standard under our counterfeit fractional banking system, the investors faced little risk, with an expectation of great rewards. The Federal Reserve funded as much as 90% of the investments. If the bonds were profitable, the borrowers benefited, but if they didn't, the Treasury Department was responsible for the depreciated assets with no negative consequences for the borrowers.

At a March 3, 2009 Senate hearing, Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.) asked Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, "How can my constituents in Vermont get some of that money? Who makes the decisions? . . . Are there conflicts of interest?" Joe Biden, like all leaders in both major political parties, was a strong advocate for the disastrous banker bailout. He even delayed his resignation from the Senate in order to cast his final vote in favor of increased funding for the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP).

"This is a great example of the suspicion of many Americans that these bailouts were used to benefit connected insiders while ordinary Americans went broke," said Tom Anderson, director of the Government Integrity Project at the National Legal and Policy Center. ★

Son of Famed Apollo Astronaut Alleges Father Was Murdered

By Donald Jeffries

Virgil “Gus” Grissom was the second American to fly in space, and he was scheduled to be the first man to walk on the moon. Instead, he burned to death on the launching pad in the Apollo 1 command module, along with fellow astronauts Roger Chaffee and Ed White, on Jan. 27, 1967.

Grissom, despite his senior status in the space program, was considered a rabble-rouser. He told his wife Betty that, if there were ever a serious accident at NASA, it would involve him. Legend has it that he hung a lemon from the simulator to indicate his dissatisfaction with the program. He also told the media that the chances of the Apollo missions succeeding were remote. At one point, he was recorded, complaining, “How are we going to get to the moon if we can’t talk between two or three buildings?” NASA attributed the deaths to a spark igniting an instant raging fire in the highly pressurized cabin.

The first skeptic regarding the tragic loss of the Apollo 1 crew was NAA quality control and safety inspector Thomas Barron. Barron wrote a 55-page report that was highly critical of NASA’s Apollo project. He even testified before Congress, declaring that under current conditions, NASA would never make it to the moon. For his efforts, Barron was fired by NAA, who went on to publicly disavow his claims. After the Apollo 1 tragedy, Barron began turning his criticisms into a 500-page report that excoriated both NASA and NAA. Barron and his family died shortly thereafter, when a train struck the family car with all of them inside. What they were doing sitting in a car stuck on the railroad tracks would have been something worth investigating, but the deaths were predictably ruled accidental and no autopsies were performed. There were also intimations that Barron was mentally unstable and may even have committed suicide.

When the charred remains of the Apollo 1 capsule were finally opened to Grissom’s family to inspect in 1999, his widow and sons went public with their long-held doubts. Grissom’s son Scott noticed a suspicious metal plate behind one of the instrumentation panel switches, which he suspected was used to deliberately cause the initial spark. Scott declared that he felt NASA didn’t want his father to be the first man on the moon, tired of his complaints and outspoken frustration with the program. Betty Grissom agreed with her son that NASA had indeed murdered her husband and the two others. Grissom had not merely argued with his superiors about all the technical glitches they were experiencing, he had called an unauthorized press conference, where he exposed many of the program’s failures and shortcomings, and stated that it would take at least another 10 years to actually get to the moon.

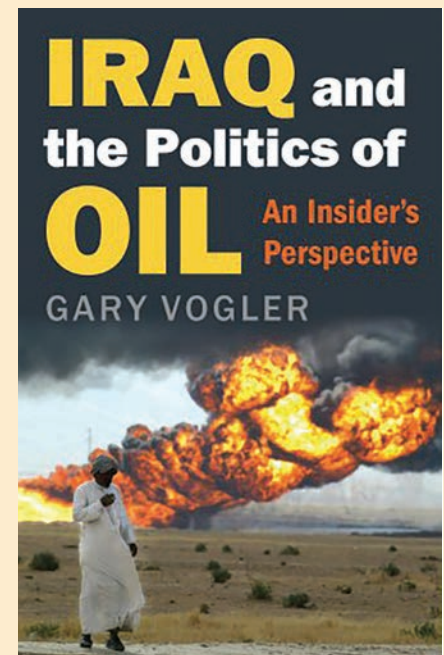

The day after the death of the Apollo 1 astronauts, FBI agents stormed the Grissom home, seizing all of his manuscripts and documents. Thomas Barron’s extended report also disappeared down the memory hole. Betty Grissom fought NASA in court for many years, even to get possession of personal artifacts like her husband’s Mercury 7 spacesuit. She also sued the manufacturer of the Apollo capsule. In addition to publicly accusing NASA of killing her husband, Betty was incensed over “NASA making money off Gus Grissom artifacts.” Grissom had further angered the space agency when he took the spacesuit and let his son use it for “show and tell” at school, and never returned it because he’d heard NASA planned to destroy it.

In 1999, Grissom told respected investigative reporter Christopher Ruddy, “My father’s death was no accident. He was murdered.” Clark MacDonald, a McDonnell-Douglas engineer hired by NASA to investigate the fire, broke more than three decades of silence that same year, saying that he determined an electrical short had sparked the fire. MacDonald claimed that NASA destroyed his report and all of his interview tapes.

“I have agonized for 31 years about revealing the truth, but I didn’t want to hurt NASA’s image or cause trouble,” MacDonald told Star magazine. “But I can’t let one more day go by without the truth being known.” The paper quoted Betty Grissom as saying, “I believe Scott has found the key piece of evidence to prove NASA knew all along what really happened but covered it up to protect funding for the race to the moon.”

In 2001, Fox Television broadcast the special, “Conspiracy Theory: Did We Land on the moon?” The show featured interviews with the Grissom family, where they reiterated their allegations against NASA.

Instead of investigative journalists reporting on the bombshell accusations against NASA by the widow and sons of the man originally selected to be the first on the moon, the story was mostly ignored or smeared as extremist nonsense. ★

Iraq and the Politics of Oil

An Insider's Perspective

BY GARY VOGLER

Iraq and the Politics of Oil* is a fascinating behind-the-scenes account of the role of the U.S. government in the Iraqi oil sector since 2003. Vogler describes the prewar oil planning and the important decisions made during hostilities to get Iraqi oil flowing months ahead of schedule. He reveals how, amid the instability of 2006, the fixing of the Baiji Refinery contributed significantly to the success of the oil sector in the Sunni part of northern Iraq during and after the surge. Vogler gives us an expert insider’s view of the largest oilfield auctions in the history of the international oil industry and massive increases in oil production. But under the successes chronicled here, a darker political narrative emerges, one that reaches back to the decision to go to war with Iraq. # ‘Wave of Anti-Semitism’ Exaggerated

• Most “anti-Semitic attacks” are shouting matches between Israel lovers and critics

By Phil Giraldi

One of the few growth industries in Donald Trump’s United States is the protection of Jewish citizens and their property from a largely contrived wave of anti-Semitism that is allegedly sweeping the nation. Even while potentially catastrophic developments in the Middle East continue to unfold, the threat of anti-Semitism continues to dominate much of the news cycle in the mainstream media.

There are a number of things that all Americans should know about the anti-Semitism hysteria. First of all, the extent to which there is actual anti-Semitism and the back story to many of the incidents has been deliberately distorted or even ignored by the press and by the government at all levels. Anti-Semitism is hatred of Jews for either their religion or their ethnicity, but many of the so-called anti-Semitic incidents are actually related to the policies advanced by the state of Israel. Organizations like the Anti-Defamation League (ADL), which have a vested interest in keeping the number of anti-Semitic incidents high, deliberately conflate the two issues in their reports.

In its 2018 report, ADL reported “1,879 acts,” in the United States during the course of the year. It is not a particularly large number given the size and population of the U.S. and also with respect to what is included. There were certainly some physical attacks, including two shooting incidents at synagogues in Pittsburgh and Poway, but most of the incidents were much less kinetic, including shouting and name calling on university campuses between groups supportive of and opposed to Israel’s repression of the Palestinians.

Sen. Chuck Schumer (left), Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand (center), and New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo participate in the No Fear, No Hate Solidarity March over the Brooklyn Bridge, spurred by a machete attack against one rabbi and four other Passover worshippers last December. There was no march, however, for the approximately 1,500 New York rape victims of 2019 nor for the more than 300 victims of homicide in New York—99% of whom weren’t Jewish. PHOTO BY K. COUGHLIN/OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

Politicians, the media, and Jewish leaders have all blamed much of the alleged violent anti-Semitism on “white supremacists,” but any examination of the actual incidents does not support that view. Anyone who has any knowledge of the so-called white groups is aware that they are little more than a fringe movement within a fringe movement. Most of the physical attacks on Jews actually are carried out by blacks and most of those attacks are based on aggressive behavior by the largely Hasidic Jewish communities in New York City and surrounding areas. Hasidic Jews are relatively easy to identify as targets because of their distinctive attire, but the tension between the black community, which is being displaced by gentrifying and hostile Hasidic communities, is the root cause of the problem, not religion or race.

Indeed, the whole story of Hasidic community growth and its impact on some established neighborhoods has been pretty much ignored by the mainstream press. Hasidic activities in Brooklyn, in Jersey City, in New York ex-urb Bloomingburg and Lakewood and Toms River, New Jersey are deplorable, and attempts by local communities to fight back are regularly met with claims that the locals are anti-Semites. Hasidim routinely register their homes as places of worship to avoid property taxes, making other local residents pay for police and fire services as well as maintenance of infrastructure. When sufficient Hasidim become residents to get elected to the public school board, they divert the funding of state provided education to support their own private schools. As Ha-

Two Books from AFP Explain Why America Is in the Mideast

America’s “War on Terrorism”

Michel Chossudovsky blows away the smoke-screen put up by the mainstream media, that 9/11 was an attack on America by Islamic terrorists. This expanded edition, which includes 12 new chapters, focuses on the use of 9/11 as a pretext for the invasion and illegal occupation of Iraq, the militarization of justice and law enforcement and the repeal of democracy. According to Chossudovsky, the “war on terrorism” is a complete fabrication based on the illusion that one man, Osama bin Laden, outwitted the $40 billion-a-year American intelligence apparatus. The war on terrorism is a war of conquest. Globalization is the final march to the New World Order, dominated by Wall Street and the Pentagon. Softcover, 387 pages, $25.

A Century of War: Anglo-American Oil Politics and the New World Order

“Control the oil and you control entire nations,” said famed U.S. political advisor and longtime Deep State operative Henry Kissinger. Oil is an instrument of world domination in the grip of the Anglo-American empire. This book is a gripping account of the murky world of the Anglo-American oil industry and its hidden role in world politics. F. William Engdahl takes the reader through the history of how seven giant oil companies—five American and two British—developed a controlling grip on the world’s economy unprecedented in history. This is no ordinary history of oil. It is a history of global geopolitics—how control of strategic geographical pivot regions helps control in large part the world economy. Softcover, 352 pages, $25.

sidim get married within their community and do not register with the state, the women routinely file as single mothers to get public childcare subsidy checks. The men often do not work at all so they can study the Talmud so they are able to engage in wholesale welfare fraud, claiming poverty, to get food stamps, social security, and other money services.

Hasidim also do not consider the judicial system applicable to themselves. They have private courts that have served to hide criminals including even child molesters in their community. Once they achieve a certain presence in a town or city neighborhood, they buy up buildings and force long-term residents out. They ignore building codes and zoning to bring in co-religionists with their large families, and, once established, they create enclaves that are hostile to outsiders.

That has been the source of much of the tension with blacks in New York City and Jersey City as well as with suburban and rural whites north of New York City and in Lakewood and Toms River, New Jersey.

A final source of anti-Semitism incidents is Jews themselves who, for various reasons, either lie or fabricate tales of their persecution. In a recent incident, a Jewish student set a fire in a dormitory at Yeshiva University. In other incidents, bomb threats and graffiti were attributed to “white supremacists” but later determined to have been done by young Jewish males.

No matter how one regards the anti-Semitism issue, there is one thing for sure, and that is that 2020 will cost non-Jewish taxpayers a lot of money. There will be considerable money in the pipeline for Jewish groups to establish and maintain security for their buildings and other facilities with the federal government not surprisingly leading the charge. On Dec. 31, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.), who is Jewish and regards himself as the protector of Israel in the Senate, said he would introduce legislation to quadruple the Department of Homeland Security’s annual Nonprofit Security Grant Program. It would make available $360 million. The grant program is already completely corrupted through the kind of offices of folks like Schumer and serves essentially as a free handout to Jewish organizations. Over 90% of the money disbursed annually now goes to Jewish recipients for security and infrastructure upgrades, a percentage that will surely continue.

There is a certain irony in all of the tax money going to protect the wealthiest and most politically powerful demographic in the United States, but that is how politics works in Washington and also at the state and local level. Police resources in New York and other cities will now be redirected to concentrate on Jewish neighborhoods and synagogues. Rockland County in New York state is going one step farther, paying for a private security force dedicated to protecting Jews and their property.

Schumer will also increase funding for a program that pays for Department of Justice experts to train state and local officials in investigating and prosecuting hate crimes while Rep. Adam Schiff (D-Calif.) has introduced a bill that would for the first time both define attacks on Jews as domestic terrorism while also at the same time making domestic terrorism a federal crime.

And there also will be increased pressure to make holocaust education mandatory in public schools. Currently, 12 states require holocaust instruction in their public school curricula, though that includes five of the six biggest states. A bipartisan bill would provide money for school districts to develop and improve their own curricula with the ultimate objective of making such education mandatory through the United States.

The response of government to the alleged wave of anti-Semitism is understandable given the political power of the Jewish community. But it is inappropriate for the state to commit scarce resources to pressure groups when students get into shouting matches at a university or religious extremists seek to carve out enclaves for themselves at the expense of an existing community. That is where government has to step back, and it also should avoid the usual remedy of throwing money at the problem. The money belongs to the American taxpayers and this is one instance where it should stay safely in their pockets. ★

Although I am in my 90th year, people meet me and say: “IT LOOKS LIKE YOU STOPPED AGING!” This is because I discovered the FOURTH STATE OF WATER (beyond solid, liquid and vapor)! An amazing NEW FORM OF ENERGY that I used at The Choate School to save my own life (I had cancer when I was 14 years old), it’s been an uphill battle in spite of saving thousands of lives worldwide for 45 years ... reported by THE FARADAY TWINS author with 16 million followers! A retiring executive with a major Washington newspaper, he used the HUNDREDS of letters and phone calls they received to write the book.

Although the massive Energy released splitting an atom (Nuclear Energy) is much greater, I discovered how to release the pent up Electron Energy in water by rapidly heating and cooling water (3 times/minute) to weaken the powerful Hydrogen Bonds and achieve the FOURTH STATE OF WATER that has a permanent 114 degree Hydrogen Bond Angle (THE HYDROGEN BONDS CAN’T RETURN BACK TO ORDINARY WATER AT 104.5 DEGREES)! At the Choate School in the 1940’s, after reading about Michael Faraday (one of the world’s greatest scientists who discovered electricity, electric motors and electrolysis ... a hero to Albert Einstein and Thomas Edison), I theorized that if the powerful Hydrogen Bond Angles could be broken (by rapid heating and cooling) and increased beyond 104.5 degrees in ordinary water, it would release the pent up Energy in the water molecules while also making it easier for the body to split water into Hydrogen and Oxygen!!

Who would know if that’s possible? Albert Einstein of course! When visiting a friend at Princeton in the late 1940’s I met the great man himself as he walked from his home to his office puffing his pipe with a trail of smoke behind him. He was known to everyone and very approachable. I asked him if the Hydrogen Bond Angle in water could be increased to release all that pent up energy. He said: “It’s possible!” and SCAM ARTISTS caused the premature demise of millions of people worldwide selling filters, distillers and “ionizers” ... making up their own crazy “tests” instead of doing EXACTLY what we advertise including the same lifesaving tests performed by Guy Abraham MD, Los Alamos Nuclear Lab and Sloan Kettering Cancer Center!! One man does an electrolysis “test” stating he’s “a scientist” without adding an electrolyte to ordinary distilled water so IT CONDUCTS ELECTRICITY!! Dah ... are they that stupid or worse? Ordinary distilled water has a Hydrogen Bond Angle of only 101 degrees! Unlike a young girl in grade school after her Science teacher brought our machine to school: “Look how much Hydrogen this water produces!” ASK THEM TO SHOW THEIR AGING FACES (as I have done). so the world can see they don’t know what they are talking about! With an Engineering Degree that includes Steam Plant Design and lifesaving Military Contracts during the Vietnam War, how many lives have they saved?!

A Vietnam draft dodger who went to Canada to “teach chemistry” was fired for his duplicitous website after scientists complained to the University. Another “scam alert expert” lost 40 lawsuits ... with no respect for human life like a Florida News Magazine owner pictured with a plastic distiller known to cause Cancer so fringe doctors can sell “health products”! Short plastic contact time (like medical tubing) is OK but long contact time leaches super fine cancer causing plastic phthalates found in virtually all humans from our air and water ... phthalates are found even in the snow at the North Pole! ★

Thank the Lord So Many Were Packing

• Had Texas parishioners not been armed with guns, shooter could have killed scores

By Mark Anderson

A key question in the aftermath of the shooting incident Dec. 29, 2019 at West Freeway Church of Christ in White Settlement, Texas near Fort Worth is whether this decisive use of firearms to prevent what would have been a much deadlier attack will break the long-established narrative in which every “mass shooting” leads to more calls for gun control.

The attack, which left two parishioners and the gunman dead, could have been much worse. It reportedly took just six seconds for Jack Wilson, a former reserve sheriff’s deputy, Army veteran, and deacon in charge of church security, to return fire when the West Freeway Church attacker, identified as 43-year-old Keith Thomas Kinnunen, opened fire with a shotgun.

Richard White, 67, another member of the church’s security team, evidently managed to get off a shot that hit a wall, but he was fatally shot by the gunman just before Wilson fatally shot Kinnunen with one pistol round to the head. One other parishioner, Anton “Tony” Wallace, 64, was also killed in the attack. The two victims died from their injuries after they were rushed to the hospital, according to the local CBS News affiliate.

The entire incident was captured on the church’s livestream video feed. An analysis of the video by “S2 Strategic Defense,” posted on YouTube, shows that the shooter had a brief word with an apparent usher standing against a nearby wall, presumably Wallace. The attacker first shot White as he struggled to remove his firearm from his coat and then shot the usher.

The hooded suspect—who clearly stood apart

After deranged homeless man Keith Thomas Kinnunen (center, top of photo, in black) opened fire on several people during a church service at West Freeway Church of Christ in White Settlement, Texas, security team members jumped into action. The gunman was taken down with one shot by Jack Wilson, a former police officer and firearms instructor. The video shows multiple members of the security team and armed parishioners pulling out weapons to protect worshippers.

in appearance from the rest of the congregation given his long black coat and “skulking” mannerisms—can be seen on the far side of the camera field getting up from a pew, taking out the pistol-grip shotgun from his heavy coat and firing at the two victims before being shot himself. Wilson dropped the shooter from about 12 to 15 yards away, aiming from the back toward the front of the sanctuary (from left to right, from the cam-era’s vantage point). Due to the physical distance of the camera from the exchange, it’s hard to make out the faces of anyone.

“From the moment he came through the door, we had eyes on him, both physical eyes and cameras,” Wilson told CBS News, adding that the shooter entered, sat down, went to the bathroom for two minutes, and then returned to his seat and opened fire during communion. Kinnunen

New! Permanent Record

What whistleblower Edward Snowden wants you to know about the massive surveillance state spying on all of us

Edward Snowden, the man who risked everything to expose the U.S. government’s system of mass surveillance, reveals for the first time the story of his life, including how he helped to build that system and what motivated him to try to bring it down. In 2013, 29-year-old Edward Snowden shocked the world when he broke with the American intelligence establishment and revealed that the U.S. government was secretly pursuing the means to collect every single phone call, text message, and email. The result would be an unprecedented system of mass surveillance with the ability to pry into the private lives of every person on Earth. Six years later, Snowden reveals for the very first time how he helped to build this system and why he was moved to expose it. Spanning the bucolic Beltway suburbs of his childhood and the clandestine CIA and NSA postings of his adulthood, Permanent Record is the extraordinary account of a bright young man who grew up online—a man who became a spy, a whistleblower, the internet’s conscience—and Public Enemy No. 1. also wore a wig and fake beard, apparently because he would have been easily recognized due to his long criminal history, including aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Authorities are investigating the motive of the shooting, and there were no immediate details about how he acquired the pistol-grip shotgun.

"We lost two great men today, but it could have been a lot worse," Senior Minister Britt Farmer told reporters. "I am thankful that our government has allowed us the opportunity to protect ourselves."

"The threat was stopped thanks to the quick and heroic actions of those safety members inside the church," White Settlement Police Chief J.P. Bevering added.

The mass media cartel too often breaks crucial journalistic rules by rushing to judgment on a wave of preconceived notions and policy agendas. While there were some welcome exceptions regarding mainstream media coverage of this case, in which the need for firearms for protection was fully displayed, some big-media outlets notorious for their shrill scribbles in favor of ever-tighter gun control nevertheless chafed and sputtered about the turn of events at the church, since it doesn't fit the predesigned always-blame-guns narrative.

USA Today suffered a Twitter storm of indignation when it tried to continue its gun-control crusade in the aftermath of the West Freeway Church attack. The newspaper ran a column by Elvia Díaz, initially published by The Arizona Republic, which did credit parishioners for promptly taking down the gunman but lamented that the incident had become yet another talking point for gun-rights advocates.

"Jack Wilson is a hero, all right. It took him only six seconds to kill a gunman at a Texas church, saving countless lives," Ms. Diaz wrote. "Unfortunately, that kind of split-second heroism has been turned into a PR tool by gun advocates. . . . We know firearms are readily available to anyone who wants one, really. And that's part of the problem. Sunday's shooting isn't just about Jack Wilson's heroism. It's about how Kinnunen got a hold of a weapon in the first place, given his criminal record."

"The shooting shined a light on a new law passed by the Texas legislature in response to the [Nov. 5] 2017 attack on a church in Sutherland Springs that left 26 people dead, allowing anyone with a concealed carry license to carry firearms in places of worship," The Washington Times, one of the nation's few reasonably sane newspapers, countered. "Mr. Wilson, who owns a shooting range in Granbury, said he started training fellow members after the law passed to be a part of the church's volunteer security team. Gun-rights advocates and conservatives, including President Trump, have pointed to the incident as an example of a good guy with a gun saving lives."

Iraq and Afghanistan military veteran Larry Provost, in a column posted at "Townhall.com," observed: "Actually, maybe the left won't say anything, at least right now, because the shooting at the West Freeway Church of Christ shows half the reason why the Second Amendment actually works, i.e., personal protection and the other, more foundational . . . half being protection from tyranny." ★

Psychopaths: Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow— Is America Fast Becoming a Psychopath Nation?

Texe Marrs's groundbreaking research on the alarming explosion of psychopaths across America has serious implications for you and your loved ones. This is the first and only book to fully explore psychopathy from a political/social perspective and it was the last book ever written by prolific author Texe Marrs.

After first explaining the warped psychopathic mindset, Marrs goes on to describe how a sick and decadent society actually fosters psychopathic behavior and encourages disorderly, criminal, anti-social activity. Marrs shows how psychopathic activity continues to cyclically increase in society until it finally reaches what he terms "Crazy Times." This is a fantastic period in which anything goes and psychopaths practically run amok.

(Look at political and social events unfolding now. How can anyone deny we are living on the threshold of the "Crazy Times" right now or argue that psychopaths are not eternally embedded in important positions in government and within our intelligence services?)

This chaotic situation is usually followed by a totalitarian historic era similar to the Bolshevik/Soviet era and the reign of Mao Tse-Tung. Some people would argue that the "Crazy Times" in Weimar Germany ushered another totalitarian leader into office: Adolf Hitler. Psychopathic con-men take charge of the government, make incomprehensible changes, and commence horrific crimes against normal humans. America is even now at the threshold of this terrible age of psychopathic destruction.

Look around you. Are the American people running the show or are the psychopaths in charge? Who are they? How did they gain control? How do they maintain control? What can we do about it?

• Some suspicious of strange actions of coroner who did autopsy on Lori Klausutis

By Donald Jeffries

The mysterious death of 28-year-old Lori Klausutis, an aide to then Rep. Joe Scarborough (R-Fla.), remains under-reported and under-investigated, even by so called “conspiracy theorists.”

On July 20, 2001, the dedicated young woman was found dead behind a desk in Scarborough’s Walton Beach, Fla. office. She had a head wound, but the official cause of death would nonsensically be attributed to an undetected heart condition. Michael Berkland, the doctor who performed the autopsy, had his license to practice medicine revoked in Missouri in 1998, and suspended a year later in Florida. American Politics Journal attempted to establish through the Florida Medical Examiners Commission whether or not Berkland’s suspension had ever been lifted, but they were unsuccessful in doing so.

Klausutis was a well-known jogger in peak physical condition. Despite this, Scarborough’s press secretary Miguel Serrano appeared on local television stations shortly after her body was discovered, proclaiming that she’d had a history of health problems. Another Scarborough aide, Tiffany Bates, seemingly the last person to speak with Klausutis, helpfully shared the fact that Lori had told her she wasn’t feeling well.

An unnamed mail carrier told authorities she “appeared nervous” on July 19, and also said she wasn’t feeling well. Berkland maintained that “she had a past medical history that was significant.”

Local papers even mentioned the possibility of suicide. Even the most creative minds in American intelligence would hesitate to allege that someone took their own life by striking their head

The unsatisfactorily explained death of Lori Klausutis (left), an aide to former Florida Rep. Joe Scarborough (center), has some people wondering if there was a cover-up. It didn’t help when Medical Examiner Michael Berkland was convicted of falsifying autopsies. Is it possible that she passed out and fractured her skull on the desk at which she was sitting?

upon a desk.

Klausutis’s family understandably objected to this mischaracterization of their daughter’s medical history, and was particularly incensed over the intimations about suicide. “The thought of suicide, as your published reports suggested, is absolutely unthinkable,” a letter to the editor of the Northwest Florida Daily News from the family declared. “Suicide was contrary to her faith and being. She did not suffer from seizures, nor did she have a history of medical problems.”

The curious coverage of Klausutis’s death included the unfathomable failure to mention her work for Scarborough in her obituary. The North- west Florida Daily News generally held the party line along with the rest of the fake news media, but in one story, they reported that Klausutis’s head injury was more severe than had been acknowledged and lobbied for the release of records that were being strangely withheld by the police.

American Politics Journal was one of the few outlets in the press to ask questions about this case. One of their reporters, R.S. Miller, questioned the aforementioned Scarborough aide Miguel Serrano, which caused him to lose his temper, angrily exclaiming, “Isn’t there anything else you could be doing?” An officer with the Fort Walton Beach Police actually hung up on Miller,

HATE CRIME HOAX

How the Left Is Selling a Fake Race War

If you believe the news, today’s America is plagued by an epidemic of violent hate crimes. But is that really true? In Hate Crime Hoax, Professor Wilfred Reilly examines over 100 widely publicized incidents of so-called hate crimes that never actually happened. Reilly debunks these fabricated incidents—many of them alleged to have happened on college campuses—and explores why so many Americans are driven to fake hate crimes. We’re not experiencing an epidemic of hate crimes, Reilly concludes, but we might be experiencing an unprecedented epidemic of hate crime hoaxes. Dr. Reilly’s book is a must read on the epidemic of hate crime hoaxes, especially given the recent high-profile case of Jussie Smollett. The mainstream media and social media sites are quick to report on alleged hate crimes with little or no evidence or investigation. They also fail miserably to ask difficult questions and follow up when presented with contradictory evidence. Additionally, many media sites have recently removed articles they have published about fake hate crimes. after summarily informing her that Klausutis's death was "nobody's business." The captain and the chief of police also refused to help. Northwest Florida Daily News reporter Tom McLaughlin was missing Miller's investigative zeal, a characteristic also absent in seemingly all professional journalists nowadays. McLaughlin expressed his support for the controversial Berkland, stating, "Suffice to say that I like Dr. Berkland very much as a person and greatly respect his work as medical examiner." He would sarcastically tell American Politics Journal, in response to a request for comments about the numerous questions left unanswered by the authorities, "Comment on what? Your ability to cut and paste?"

Klausutis's body was supposedly discovered by a couple, Andreas and Juanita Bergmann, who'd had an appointment with Scarborough about the husband's green card application. This is decidedly odd, since Scarborough was scheduled to be in Washington, D.C., and would only later fly back to Florida, after Klausutis's death was announced. The question naturally arises: Why would such an appointment have been scheduled when Scarborough was out of town? Juanita Bergmann, a former nurse, would offer up her speculation that Klausutis, who did not suffer from epilepsy, had suffered an epileptic seizure. Berkland's Warren Commission-like medical report contained no description of the death scene, or diagram of the body location. Oddly, the Emerald Coast Young Republicans removed all references to Klausutis from their website, despite the fact she'd been their president.

Five days before the events of Sept. 11, 2001, just two months after the death of Klausutis, Scarborough left Congress. During one of his numerous Twitter battles with the media, President Donald Trump tweeted a jab at MSNBC and Scarborough, now the host of their "Morning Joe" show, declaring: "And will they terminate low-ratings Joe Scarborough based on the 'unsolved mystery' that took place in Florida years ago? Investigate!"

Like everything else with Trump, this snippet was tantalizing but he failed to elaborate. The matter rests, as it did more than 18 years ago, with an absolute media blackout on updated information regarding this case. ★

Trump Wins on China Trade Deal

• President set to sign renegotiated deal in attempt to address trade inequities

By Mark Anderson

President Donald Trump will formally sign a “phase one” trade deal with China at the White House Jan. 15, which reportedly contains several positives for the U.S. in terms of rebalancing U.S.-China trade relations. This is expected to correct China’s “bad behavior” in specific areas.

In the 86-page agreement, according to a White House overview, “China has agreed to structural reforms in areas of intellectual property, technology transfer, agriculture, financial services, and currency and foreign exchange.”

Those are the key areas in which China has misbehaved for far too long, most analysts would agree, although the dominant anti-tariff internationalists have the clout (and Trump’s ear) for promoting their view and burying a more populist-nationalist approach to achieving economic equilibrium and true prosperity with more domestic self-sufficiency [i.e., autarky], less dependence on international trade and the creation of a sovereign U.S. currency free of debt and interest.

Regarding technology transfer, the internationalist Peterson Institute for International Economics (PIIE) produced a June 2018 paper that reveals some concerns the White House has as it enters into the first phase of the U.S.-China pact, with high hopes to soon proceed to phase two.

The paper noted: “In a report issued March 22, 2018, the United States Trade Representative cited numerous instances of forced technology transfer and failure to protect U.S. intellectual property from infringement or theft . . . . A broad range of experts and market observers agree that China has repeatedly forced foreign multinational corporations [MNCs, including, of course, American domiciled corporations] to transfer technology to [Chinese] indigenous firms as a condition for market access and that China has persistently failed to protect the intellectual property of foreign firms.”

Discussing the options the White House has as it moves away from levying tariffs, the PIIE report continued: “At the same time, stock markets, American industry, and farm sectors dependent on exports to China have been worried . . . by the prospect of a U.S.-China trade war . . . . Fortunately, there is a better way. Instead of indiscriminate tariffs, carefully targeted sanctions should be imposed on the Chinese entities directly involved in technology misappropriation.”

The White House overview adds: “The agreement includes a strong dispute resolution system to ensure effective implementation and enforcement. As a result, we will be able to ensure full enforcement of this phase-one agreement and the reforms it includes. As a part of this agreement, the United States has agreed to significantly modify its Section 301 tariffs.”

“When Trump and Chinese officials announced the phase-one agreement in mid-December [of 2019], the U.S. agreed to shelve plans to impose new tariffs on $160 billion of Chinese goods that had been set to take effect Dec. 15,” USA Today noted. Thus, the tariffs that Trump has threatened or imposed so far on Chinese goods are being described largely as a means to prod China to negotiate—not so much as a permanent, proper method of economic protection and revenue source for the U.S. Treasury.

Forbes business writer Charles Wallace on July 21, 2018 described the volatile situation Washington and China are trying to settle: “Trump is trying to force China to stop stealing intellectual prop-

The Trayvon Hoax: Unmasking the Witness Fraud that Divided America

By examining Trayvon Martin’s 750-page cell phone records, Joel Gilbert discovers that the key witness for the prosecution of George Zimmerman, the plus-sized 18-year-old Rachel Jeantel, was a fraud. It was, in fact, a different girl who was on the phone with Trayvon just before he was shot. She was the 16-year-old named Diamond whose recorded conversation with attorney Benjamin Crump ignited the public, swayed President Obama, and provoked the nation’s media to demand Zimmerman’s arrest. Gilbert’s painstaking research takes him through the high schools of Miami, into the back alleys of Little Haiti, and finally to Florida State University where he finds Trayvon’s real girlfriend, the real phone witness, Diamond Eugene. Gilbert confirms his revelations with forensic handwriting analysis and DNA testing. After obtaining unredacted court documents and reading Diamond’s vast social media archives, Gilbert then reconstructs the true story of Trayvon Martin’s troubled teenage life and tragic death. In the process, he exposes in detail the most consequential hoax in recent American judicial history, that was ground zero for the downward spiral of race relations in America. BOOK: Softcover, 272 pages, $17. DVD: 120 minutes—$19. erty from U.S. companies,” since China’s rules that enable such theft constitute “a blatant violation of World Trade Organization rules that Beijing agreed to when it joined the WTO in December 2001.”

Wallace continued, “Each time Trump raises his bet by adding new tariffs, China responds with an equal amount of import duties on American goods. Both sides want the other to blink first. But here’s the tricky part: While the U.S. bought $505 billion of goods from China last year [2017], the Chinese only bought $129 billion worth of U.S. goods [a U.S. deficit of $376 billion, which is typical].

“So, one strategem for the Chinese is to hit back in another, non-tariff way. Such as making their goods cheaper so that the Trump tariffs don’t make a difference. Enter the renminbi. China has allowed the currency to decline 7.6% against the dollar in just the last four months [as of mid-2018]. That’s a huge drop, and almost negates Trump’s threatened 10% import tariffs on some Chinese products.”

It indeed may be of strategic necessity to reign in China’s abuses and keep the communist-capitalist slave state placated—especially considering the heavy dependency the U.S. has long had on China for underwriting the U.S. dollar. And while Trump wants to keep American farmers and other exporters happy, in order to uphold those economic sectors (and to keep his current campaign promise to get a “rebalance” deal with China), the pressure to strictly limit or phase out U.S. tariffs on Chinese and other foreign imports seems overwhelming. This may prove unfortunate.

The real test of whether U.S. trade with China has been “rebalanced” will be if the notoriously massive U.S. trade deficit with China—which for decades has cost the U.S. hundreds of billions of dollars per year while giving China a surplus it leverages to build its military and cyber-spying capabilities—will finally be laid to rest so truly balanced and fair trade will ensue. Another test will be whether the U.S. will maintain sufficient (not punitive) tariffs on imports from China (and elsewhere) in order to pump badly needed, externally sourced revenue into the U.S. Treasury that is not derived from the already over-taxed American domestic economy. ★

Something Needs to Be Done Now to Rescue U.S. Higher Education

By Richard McCarty

America's educational-industrial complex is broken, and swift reform is needed. College costs continue to rise much faster than inflation, and too many students are plowing themselves into debt and wasting years of their lives pursuing pointless degrees. Upon leaving college, these students are often surprised to discover that their degrees have little value. Of course, most colleges are liberal indoctrination centers, where conservative voices are few and often drowned out.

It is time for the federal government—and state and local governments—to stop picking winners and losers. It is unfair for the federal government to recognize the American Bar Association as the sole accreditor of law schools and allow it to erect unnecessary hurdles to keep people from pursuing law degrees. It is indefensible for governments to subsidize unreliable solar and wind projects that drive up electricity bills. It is illegitimate for state governments to license hair braiders and interior designers to lock competitors out of the field. It is improper for the federal government to grant immunity to credit reporting agencies in spite of their negligence and incompetence. It is wrong for governments to deny poor people due process and allow predatory towing companies to sell their cars when they cannot afford exorbitant towing fees. And, finally, just as it is improper for states to subsidize filmmaking, it is wrong for the federal government to shovel money to colleges via student loans.

In order to address these problems, the federal government should do four things: privatize student loans, sell off the government's portfolio of student debt, allow students to discharge college debt in bankruptcy, tie lending rules to the value of a degree, and require colleges to repay half of the remaining value of discharged loans.

The first step is the federal government needs to end its own college loans. It should also sell off its student loan portfolio, which is nominally worth more than $1.5 trillion. Unfortunately, more than 40% of student loans are already considered to be "in distress." Even worse, according to one estimate, 40% of student loan borrowers are expected to be in default in just three years. If for no other reason, the federal government should sell off its student loan portfolio to stem its losses on these toxic assets.

In addition, Congress should pass legislation to once again allow former students to discharge college debt in bankruptcy if a borrower is unable to find a decent job years after leaving college. In the past, borrowers were allowed to do this, but bankruptcy laws were tightened after lobbying by the banks. One reason that conservatives should support allowing the use of bankruptcy to discharge crushing student debt is to allow more young people to move on with their lives. Conservatives are often dismayed that more young people are not moving out of their parents' homes, marrying, buying a home, and having children—things that tend to make one more conservative. One of the major reasons for this is student debt. Unfortunately, bankruptcy for student debt is seen by some as merely a way of letting borrowers off the hook, but it should really be viewed as a way of holding lenders accountable. For years, government lenders have happily loaned money to unserious students and those who wish to pursue frivolous degrees.

Bankruptcy for student debt, plus privatization, would encourage lenders to be more prudent with their money.

Better regulations would tie lending practices to the value of a degree and job prospects in chosen fields. The fewer jobs available in a chosen major, the riskier the loan.

Finally, colleges should be required to cover half of the outstanding loan balances when alums discharge debt in bankruptcy, thereby sharing the risk with lenders. Much of this is because colleges have been admitting unserious students, coddling and indoctrinating students, offering junk degrees, and cranking out graduates who are unprepared for the real world. Requiring colleges to reimburse banks for a portion of their losses would motivate colleges to stop trying to enroll anyone and everyone with a pulse. It should also lead to colleges cutting costs, eliminating pointless degrees, and focusing less effort on training social justice warriors and more on helping the next generation build the economy.

One way or another, the U.S. needs less college debt, fewer college graduates with worthless degrees, and more trade-school graduates, more apprentices, and more entrepreneurs.

These straightforward reforms should help advance these goals while making a positive difference for students, parents, and taxpayers. ★

Do New Vegetarian Hamburgers Pose a Health Concern for Men?

By Mark Anderson

Some say that artificial meats like the substitute manufactured by Impossible Foods for Burger King's "impossible whopper" should not cause concern and that consuming them is by-and-large safe. Others, however, warn that the heavy soy content in the "veggie matter" that comprises the impossible whopper contains a whopping amount of the female hormone estrogen—which consumed in large quantities can make men grow "man boobs."

This food fight over the impossible whopper became nationally apparent just before the new year when, on Dec. 26, 2019, The Washington Post criticized South Dakota veterinarian James Stangle, accusing him of bias in his recent article in the pro-beef industry trade journal Tri-State Livestock News, "Impossible burgers are made of what?" Stangle asserts that, all things considered, the substitute meat is a risky option for human health, especially men's health, and that even the regular whopper's "hormone implanted beef" is a better choice.

Specifically, Stangle wrote: "The impossible whopper patty is made from 24 ingredients. The most important ingredient is soy protein. The whopper patty contains just one ingredient. That would be beef. . . . Let's compare the estrogen hormone in an impossible whopper to the whopper made from hormone-implanted beef. The impossible whopper has 44 mg. of estrogen and the whopper has 2.5 ng. of estrogen. Now let me refresh your metric system. There are 1 million nanograms (ng) in one milligram (mg). That means an impossible whopper has 18 million times as much estrogen as a regular whopper. Just six glasses of soymilk per day has enough estrogen to grow breasts on a male. That's the equivalent of eating four impossible whoppers per day. You would have to eat 880 pounds of beef from an implanted steer to equal the amount of estrogen in one birth control pill."

The Post—acting as if it has no bias of its own despite its heavy corporatist-globalist leanings—poo-hooed Stangle's views while portraying the issue as a stalemate.

"Whether [soy] is good, bad, or indifferent depends entirely on who you read and what you read," New York University nutrition professor Marion Nestle was quoted as saying by the Post. "There is an enormous . . . amount of literature on soy estrogens, and it comes to sort of baffling conclusions. Some studies show harm, some studies show benefits."

Nestle then suggested looking to cultures that have historically consumed soy products.

"Asians have been eating soy products for millennia and don't seem to be any the worse for it. They have among the longest lifespans and best health, at least in classic diets," she told the Post. "There is a special concern about . . . men and boys who eat soy products, but . . . they don't grow breasts."

But Weston A. Price Foundation President Sally Fallon Morell strongly disagrees.

Noting the foundation's considerable soy research, she explained: "Soy has 10 times more estrogen than the next-highest legume, which is peas. Asians have eaten soy for 1,000 years but not in large amounts. Traditionally, it's been a condiment—two tablespoons for the Japanese and two teaspoons for the Chinese, and that's in the context of a high-iodine diet that mitigated the thyroid-destroying effects of soy."

In addition, fermented soy products are safer for human consumption than non-fermented soy products. Soy sauce is a fermented soy product.

While noting that Stangle's estimate of 44 mg of soy in the impossible burger appears to be correct, she recalled a case where Illinois prisoners were fed a high-soy diet from 2003 to 2019 and many of the men developed breasts. "They called it chemical castration. A lot of them developed thyroid problems and horrible digestive problems," she said, adding that the process of fermenting soy gets rid of digestive toxins but not estrogen.

And while soy sales have been slumping, she said, the impossible burger may be an attempt to juice up sales. The problem, though, is that the oddball Burger King offering is another means of getting people to consume what would otherwise be thrown away as a waste product, much like fluoride in public water.

"Soy protein isolate is a waste product from the soy oil industry and that's what became the impossible burger," Fallon Morell added. "Back in the 1970s, they figured out how to extract protein from the sludge that remains after they've pressed the oil out of the soybeans. The toxins are still there. [The products made from this] started with bacon bits, then fake sausages, and onward to a more real-looking burger." ★

Media Out of Touch With Voters

• Mainstream at a loss to explain popularity of Boris Johnson and Donald Trump

By S.T. Patrick

Boris Johnson rode the support of Brexit to a rousing defeat of Jeremy Corbyn in the UK parliamentary elections late last year, and Donald Trump roars into 2020 as the favorite against much of the Democratic field. The mainstream media (MSM), however, remains driven by the negative characterization of both.

The MSM claims that Trump is a dangerous buffoon incapable of making a good decision, while Johnson is a boorish racist, impatiently waiting to extinguish undesirables from the Queen's country. Both are wildly unpopular, the mainstream media say, election results apparently notwithstanding. Despite the reflexive negativity of the MSM, voters have already spoken differently and continue to know better. Yet, how can the MSM be so wrong?

First, the mainstream media begins with narratives they wish to be true, then the search is on to find numbers and anecdotes that validate what they believe should be reality.

London's Independent reported last August that Johnson's government was more unpopular in his first week as appointed prime minister than any PM had been in over 40 years. According to an Ipsos Mori poll (the media's validator, in this case), almost 75% of the people were already dissatisfied with the new government's performance.

Throughout the election campaign, the British media touted Corbyn, the left-wing Labour leader, as a wonderful candidate, someone to lead the Mother Country through these turbulent times. After Johnson trounced Corbyn in the election, the fake news media now portrays Corbyn as the worst of candidates, someone whose incompetence was the only reason Johnson won. If only Johnson would have faced a real opponent, the thinking goes, his massive unpopularity would have caused his defeat.

If this sounds familiar to Americans, it should. Throughout the 2016 campaign, Hillary Clinton was the president-to-be. The campaign was a mere formality, the road on which the Democratic Party's second consecutive historical presidency would be won. YouTube is now the home to multiple videos showing aghast reporters, incredulously speechless on Election Night 2016. They couldn't believe what was happening before their own eyes as they begged to call something much different than the Trump victory that happened. After the race ended, the narrative turned to the faults of Clinton as a candidate and, of course, fake stories of Russian election interference. Had it been anyone else, they argued, Trump would surely have lost.

Second, and this is a recurring problem, the MSM in both countries is out of touch with the majority of voters. Richard Nixon's strategists famously created the phrase "silent majority" to describe those who, against the 1960s media's wishes, elected the former vice president to the White House in 1968. The coastal appeal of the vocal minority was that they were beautifully different, made-for-TV in the “era of change.” They, however, were not representative of the vast majority of voters who existed in what would later be derisively dismissed as “flyover states,” a phrase that itself implies a lack of importance given to the states and people between the coasts.

As horrific as it was to the media that the vote of a 70-year-old Baptist minister in Iowa would count as much as feminist Gloria Steinem, the GOP has found those voters to be a dependable base. Whether the Republicans in 2020 currently represent their true interests can be debated, but the Democrats have all but ignored them and, in many cases, have mocked them. Hence, the shock and awe present on the media’s faces as Trump voters took Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan, and Pennsylvania in 2016.

Third, Republicans and likely voters who lean right have become distrustful of the media and the pollsters. They will give pollsters purposely bizarre answers, or they will decline to take part in the poll. They understand how they will be portrayed, and they are refusing to play ball. This refusal, even some left-leaning pollsters have suggested, has thrown off the margin of error inherent in every scientific poll.

Despite the UK media continuing their assault on the supposed unpopularity of Brexit, those who support it continue to win and win big. Despite the American media’s insistence that Trump is failing, the assault continues to embolden the electorate that feels similarly attacked. And as long as the media continues to play a better-than-you and smarter-than-you game with a majority of voters in both countries, they will continue being surprised by the decisions of those same voters. ★

Embedded in the Pay of the CIA-- A Confession from the Profession

BY DR. UDO ULFKOTTE

German journalist Udo Ulfkotte reveals how he and his colleagues are corrupted and entrapped like modern-day mockingbirds in the tentacles of the ultimate paymaster—the CIA.

The book became a bestseller in Germany—then Ulfkotte died under mysterious circumstances. A small U.S. publisher named Tayen Lane promised to publish an English edition—but apparently never got as far as translating it. Tayen Lane, which looks to have been a print-on-demand vanity press, is now defunct. There was considerable speculation that the translation was suppressed by Deep State actors, which certainly did not want this book published in English or any other language.

from

The original title translates to “Bought Journalists: How Politicians, Secret Agencies and High Finance Steer Germany’s Mass Media.” Understand that there was no need to slip payoff envelopes to newsmen. They would get the bribes in their regular paychecks! The entire system is not only bought and corrupt, it was installed by the U.S. during the Allied occupation after WWII and continues to this day. Ulfkotte hammers away at the corruption of elite organizations and the “mockingbird press,” which set the tone and the rules of the game for the puppets who pen their pieces for this fake news scheme.

'Barbarians' Sack Sweden

• Bombings, rapes, assaults rise; multiculturalism fails

By John Friend

The once stable, prosperous, and homogeneous nation of Sweden has seen steadily rising levels of violence, crime including rape, and, shockingly, bombings and explosions in recent years, as unchecked migration and nationally suicidal policies have entirely transformed the Scandinavian nation.

According to a recent report published by Breitbart, the research and fact-finding Crime Prevention Council, under Sweden's Ministry of Justice, recorded a stark rise in the number of explosions and bombings in Sweden over the course of the past year, largely due to migrant gang violence. The council recorded roughly 236 explosion and bombing incidents in 2019, while only 162 such incidents were recorded in 2018.

Stefan Hector, a law enforcement official from Sweden's National Operations Department, is deeply concerned about the safety and well-being of Swedish citizens given the dramatic increase in such violent events.

"Before, we were seeing hand grenades being used. Now, we see homemade charges, instead, like weapons used in conflict," Hector explained. "These are used either to hurt or intimidate, but now there is a new recklessness, as the bombings occur in places where members of the public are put at risk. The bombers are indifferent to the fact that people could be hurt."

As mayhem increases in the West due to state-enforced multiculturalism, Western leaders show no signs of admitting the problem.

Swedish officials and political leaders of all stripes, like other Western leaders, have insisted that massive Third World immigration has nothing to do with the rising violence and crime plaguing their nation, refusing to honestly address the issue for fear of being labeled "racist" and insensitive. Officials instead blame "poverty" and a failure to assimilate—obviously referring to immigrants—as the leading causes of the increasing levels of crime and violence, despite the obvious reality that the vast majority of all of the violent incidents in the West are committed by migrants or their offspring.

In the United Kingdom, law enforcement officials have been reluctant to address or even prosecute outrageous crimes committed by migrants, including sexual grooming and rape of young British girls, due to political correctness and fear of being slandered as "racist."

On the other hand, in recent years, UK police have diverted resources and officer manpower to record what are called "non-crime hate incidents," Orwellian "offenses" designed to enforce political correctness. According to a recent report published by The Telegraph, a major UK daily, 87,000

Criminal immigrants set multiple cars on fire in Gothenburg. Attacks like this—and worse—are happening in the hundreds across Sweden, in good neighborhoods and bad.

"non-crime hate incidents" have been recorded by police forces in England and Wales over the course of the past five years, demonstrating the priorities of the UK government and police force.

Under the UK's Orwellian Hate Crime Operational Guidelines, incidents perceived to be motivated by hostility or contempt for a person's religious, racial, or gender identity must be investigated and reported, resulting in law enforcement officials monitoring private citizens' social media accounts and comments sections on major websites and investigating reported "hate incidents." Meanwhile, actual violent crime—often committed by migrants—is increasing in the UK as well, though less reported in the media. Even comedians have been targeted for using politically incorrect language in their comedy routines.

As violence and mayhem increase in the West due to massive Third World immigration and state-enforced multiculturalism, Western leaders sadly show no signs of seriously confronting the issue as we enter the new year. ★

WAKE UP, SWEDEN: Bomb attacks are evidently now a normal part of Swedish life. Three bombs went off in one night in Stockholm and more in other cities, including Linköping, where 25 people were injured. All of these blasts are tied to immigrant gang violence, showing just how quickly a nation can be ruined by Third World immigrants who do not know how to live in a civilized Western country.

Culture War Comes to the Old Dominion

• Vast percentage of Virginians cling to culture heroes, guns, Bibles—and that's good

By Patrick J. Buchanan

Since 1969, “Virginia Is for Lovers” has been the tourism and travel slogan of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Advertising Age called it “one of the most iconic ad campaigns in the past 50 years.” But the Virginia of 2020 seems to be another country than the friendly commonwealth to which this writer moved four decades ago.

Charlottesville, home to Thomas Jefferson's University of Virginia, has become famous as the site of a 2017 clash between antifa and nationalists over the removal of a statue of Robert E. Lee from a municipal park. During the clash, protester Heather Heyer was run over and killed.

There followed the inauguration of a new Democratic governor, Ralph Northam, in 2018 and a new attorney general. Both, it was learned, had masqueraded in blackface in their college days. And two women accused their colleague, new Lt. Gov. Justin Fairfax, of rape.

Resignations were demanded. But all three hunkered down, and the crisis abated. Now a new cultural issue has emerged.

First-term Rep. Jennifer Wexton, from the D.C. suburbs, has denounced Virginia's representation in the U.S. Capitol by statues of George Washington in the Rotunda and Robert E. Lee in the crypt a floor below. Both statues have represented Virginia for more than a century.

Wexton wants Lee replaced by an African American hero from a list that she and Rep. A. Donald McEachin reportedly submitted.

Two names on their list are unfamiliar figures from the desegregation days of the 1950s. The third is better known: Nat Turner.

In The Americans: A Social History of the United States, published in 1969, author J. C. Furnas describes the deeds of the man Wexton and McEachin would be pleased to see replace Robert E. Lee:

“In August 1831, Nat Turner, paranoid slave preacher and conjur man, led his superstitionfuddled followers to kill 55 whites of all sexes and ages in an aimless terrorizing of Southhampton County in the southeastern corner of Virginia.

“The poor twisted creature could hardly have found a worse time to sharpen Southern fears of a slave rising.” Turner was tried and hanged and, that winter, writes Furnas, “The Virginia legislature voted down by a narrow margin a bill for gradual extinction of slavery.”

Turner's terrorism had set back emancipation. Let me go out on a limb: If the Virginia General Assembly votes to replace Robert E. Lee in the U.S. Capitol with a statue of Turner, it will not be the unifying event Wexton imagines.

But the assembly will be dealing soon with measures even more volatile.

On Jan. 20, “Lobby Day” at the Assembly, thousands of gun advocates, many openly armed, will be coming to Richmond to protest new gun laws Northam and his new Democratic majority campaigned on and are determined to deliver.

Already, 110 towns, cities and counties in Virginia have created “Second Amendment sanctuaries” where new state laws that restrict gun rights will not be enforced by local authorities.

As The Washington Post writes, “Virginia is a former Confederate State with strong rural traditions and lax gun laws. Guns represent the strongest, reddest line against the demographic changes that have seen Old Dominion voters usher in a new era of Democratic leadership in recent elections.

“A Nevada-based group called the Oath Keepers said it is sending training teams to help form posses and militia in Virginia. The leader of a Georgia militia called Three Percent Security Force has posted videos and calls to arms on Facebook, urging ‘patriots’ to converge on Richmond.”

Still, the divisions among Virginians are not only over history, heroes and guns, they are also moral and religious.

A year ago, Northam said he supported abortion through all nine months of pregnancy, and beyond, if an abortion were unsuccessful.

Here is Northam, in his own words, on the rights of the unborn:

(Third trimester abortions are) done in cases where there may be severe deformities. There may be a fetus that's nonviable. So in this particular example, if a mother is in labor, I can tell you exactly what would happen. . . . The infant would be delivered. The infant would be kept comfortable. The infant would be resuscitated if that's what the mother and the family desired. And then a discussion would ensue between the physicians and the mother.

Unlike the seven states of the Deep South, Virginia did not vote to secede and leave the Union until President Lincoln issued his call to arms to put down the rebellion after the Confederates fired on Fort Sumter.

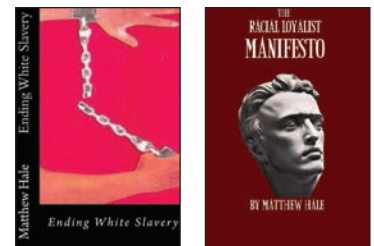

Then the state of Virginia seceded from the Union as the colony of Virginia had seceded from Great Britain at Philadelphia 84 years before.

Today, it appears a new secession is underway. Virginians are separating from each other over issues as deep and divisive—such as who can take innocent life and when—as those that divided us in 1861.

As are the rest of their countrymen in this time of Trump. ★

Much has been written about the Battle of the Little Bighorn, and even more about the ill-fated commander of the 7th Cavalry who led the troops who were massacred that day, George Armstrong Custer. But few if any have heard from those who actually witnessed the battle—the cavalymen, the officers, and those who came upon the battlefield after that dreadful two-day fight to the death. In this illustrated booklet, author Tom Goodrich takes us on a journey back to the Little Bighorn and allows the men who were there to speak for themselves in their own gripping words. As cavalry scout Billy Jackson said while he and several mates were trying to slip their way past bloodthirsty Indian braves lurking in the surrounding ravines, “Ahead of us was black darkness, heavy silence. As we went on, our hearts became more and more heavy; we feared that all of the troops had been killed.” Now hear from dozens more! Fortunately, it appears one man from Custer’s doomed command lived, and we have included an extra bonus article that discusses the tale of Frank Finkel—who survived the slaughter by pure luck. Also included are 15 illustrations with enlightening captions covering all kinds of fascinating tidbits about the battle and the personalities involved. # Learn the Truth About Communism

Donald Trump Jr.'s mother was originally from communist Czechoslovakia. While growing up, during the summer, Trump Jr. spent about a month each year visiting his Czech grandmother. He became fluent in Czech and experienced difficult life in a communist country.

After the collapse of the Soviet empire, his Czech grandmother was able to watch CNN and was appalled by the pro-socialism she observed from Americans. Trump Jr. revealed these events recently during a speech at the Reagan library in Simi Valley, Calif., televised by C-SPAN. Further, he noted that 70% of millennials could vote socialist, according to a recent poll.

Economics professor, columnist, and libertarian Dr. Walter Williams recently revealed in a column that 33% of millennials saw communism as favorable. Another recent poll shows over 50% of Democrats look favorably on socialism.

My wife, who I met in North America, was a refugee from East Germany. Her family escaped before the Berlin Wall went up and settled in West Germany. They lived under the tyranny of Hitler's "national socialism" as well as the Stalinist "international socialism." Her family felt the communists were worse, certainly at least based in terms of body counts. And, like Trump Jr.'s grandmother, she is appalled by Americans, especially Democrats, who favor socialism. She would like to pack them all off to Cuba or Venezuela, so they can experience the misery of living in a socialist country.

I am not so optimistic that left-wing liberal Democrats are capable of learning from such an experience. Consider Sen. Bernie Sanders, who "honeymooned" in the Soviet Union and returned to the states "impressed" by what he saw.

Back in the early 1990s, shortly after the Soviet collapse, I attended a left-wing conference in Chicago. I approached a booth for the American Communist Party. Identifying myself as a conservative, I asked them if they weren't chastened by the collapse of communism in Central and Eastern Europe? They insisted the Soviet bloc countries "weren't communistic," that they were "state capitalistic." Further, the people of Central and Eastern Europe were essentially "too dumb" to get communism right. But, today, Americans know how to get it right.

The American left is not only communist-minded, they are also as race-crazed as the Nazis. Only a tough customer like Donald Trump Sr. is capable of dealing with them. The corporate Republicans, like Mitt Romney, would betray middle America as a first departure step to appease the American left.

Re-elect Donald J. Trump for president in 2020. With the stock market at a record high at 28,000 and unemployment at a record low of 3.5%, he is worth retaining no matter what you think of his public personality. And remember, the Democrats still want to put guys in public bathrooms with your mother, wife, daughter, granddaughter, and niece. They call that "progressive."

THOMAS DRAKE
Indiana

Better Dead Than Red

President Trump should regard his impeachment as a badge of honor considering his reward came from scum such as Pelosi, Schiff, Nadler, Schumer etc. The Democratic Party is no longer the party of men like Jim Traficant. I don't agree with everything Trump has done, especially his dealings with Israel, but we can either vote Trump or vote Bolshevik.

It's Time to Come Home

I know AFP staff and subscribers really like President Donald J. Trump, and, to be fair, his domestic policies have been good for the U.S. economy. I think you all have to admit that his foreign policy is horrible, though. It seems like he falls for whomever is closest to him, and usually that person is his son-in-law, Jared Kushner.

On the campaign trail, Trump promised he would get the U.S. out of stupid wars in the Middle East, and he regularly—and rightfully—blasted previous presidents and Democrats and Republicans running against him for supporting stupid wars.

Following the assassination of that Iranian general, Trump is sending even more troops to the Middle East. He has not pulled out of Syria. He has only moved U.S. troops to the border with Turkey to police oilfields there.

Neither the U.S. public nor the people of the Middle East want the U.S. to be there. It's time to come home.
